Popular Father Juan remembered as a special friend

FATHER JUAN ORONOZ is remembered as a wonderful man who affected the lives of many, from the poor migrant to the affluent Pebble Beach resident. A special service for Father Juan, who passed away last week in Majorca, Spain, was conducted Sunday in Carmel Valley. A mass of celebration is planned at the Carmel Monastery for 11 a.m. Saturday, June 14 and another service will be conducted Sunday, June 15 at the Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church in Carmel Valley. Please see page 22 for details.

Planning commission to get whole new look

By MICHAEL GARDNER

NEW CARMEL Mayor Clint Eastwood plans to dismiss four planning commissioners and appoint replacements who are more in tune with his own political philosophies, the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook has learned.

Confirmation of Eastwood's appointments to the planning commission is just one of several key agenda items before the city council when it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, June 3 at city hall. The council also will discuss:

• A proposed joint parking facility with Pine Inn where the city and hotel will split the construction costs of an underground parking garage of about 96 spaces. The project would be developed in conjunction with the proposed Harrison Memorial Library annex.

• Discussion of the history of the Sunset Center parking facility and how the city wants to proceed with its development.

• Whether to proceed with the library annex on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue. From past comments, Eastwood and Councilman James Wright lean toward approval while Councilmembers Helen Arnold, Bob Fischer and Elinor Laiolo are opposed.

• The future of the senior citizen housing complex on Dolores Street. The council seems to be wary of a contract with the Monterey County Housing Authority and may be receptive to a new proposal from the Carmel Foundation to operate the units. The foundation has written a letter to the city asking that talks be renewed, according to City Administrator Doug Schmitz.

• A proposed ordinance that would loosen city controls and make it easier for an ice cream parlor to open in town. That ordinance was discussed by the planning commission last night.

Bravo to Sam

Dear Editor:

Thank you for Sam Colburn's Art Notes! Each of his columns is a miniature art appreciation lecture, done in the gentle, straightforward manner of Sam himself. There is no question that Sam is a local treasure and any art showing that gives hanging space to some of his "delicious" watercolors adds a touch of true elegance to the show.

In like manner, The Pine Cone adds a touch of true elegance with his always interesting, didactic "art notes." Bravo for you! Keep them coming, please!

Library solution

Dear Editor:

Well, here we go again.

The mayor's race was not even concluded before they started beating the drums for the library addition at Lincoln and Sixth; if this was Chicago or New Jersey I would be very suspicious.

The council keeps telling us that there is no surplus of funds yet they talk like the estimated $600,000 (you know it will be a lot more than that) to erect an annex was coming from petty cash.

I frankly do not feel that such a step is warranted; is it just an ego trip for some people who would like to see their names on a nice bronze plaque by the entrance?

About a year ago I wrote to the library commission and suggested some changes to Harrison Memorial Library that would be relatively cheap but got no answer. I doubt that Mr. E has ever seen the ideas so would like to repeat them for his information.

Twin balconies over the main reading area would add about 15,000 volumes to the inventory and not subtract from the appeal of the area — in fact the addition plus a real attempt to clean up the reading area would make it far more interesting. It's almost as if someone were trying to make that important spot as unattractive as possible.

A computer enhanced review of the volumes in the upper and lower stacks (right side facing) to see how many of these books could be relegated to storage elsewhere and placed on a call basis.

Move the administrative offices to the lower right, stack area and fill the left facing areas with stacks and a very pleasant place to read instead of the almost unusable present usage.

As a last resort I suggested the construction of a "bridge-type" addition extending over Lincoln to the Pine Inn area. The street would not be affected — no property to buy — and a most lovely place for the seniors to gather. Read, look out over the trees, and be quite separate from the hurly-burly below.

It would be far less expensive, Mr. E.

P.S.: The sketch of the proposed annex in the April 10 edition of the Pine Cone really scared me. It looks just like the early sketches of the Cottage Row shops!

Born free and equal

Dear Editor:

Now I would rather continue reading Adm. Layton's And I Was There but I feel compelled to reply to Mr. J.D. Bruce's letter (Pine Cone May 15, 1986).

His letter describes in great detail an incident he purports to have occurred on the island of Niihau Dec. 7, 1941, followed by a quantum leap of logic to suggest that Executive Order No. 9066 might have had some justification.

He states, "There are no simple answers here." Wrong! The facts are painfully simple — our government interned thousands of innocent people in concentration camps. To place the best construction on it, it was an act of hysteria — but I wonder.

In December 1944 U.S. Camera published Ansel Adams' "Born Free and Equal," which illustrated and described the concentration camp at Manzanar — there is evidence that the publication was suppressed by our government. If you can locate a copy, I suggest you review it.

Ansel Adams concludes his text with: "We must be certain that, as the rights of the individual are the most sacred elements of our society, we will not allow passion, vengeance, hatred and racial antagonism to cloud the principles of universal justice and mercy."

Any funds granted the survivors are not as Mr. Bruce writes, "A payoff," but a payback, though nothing — no amount — could ever compensate these people adequately.

Executive Order 9066 was a tragic error — no knowledgeable student of history disputes that. Should this matter, as the writer says, "be laid to rest once and for all"? No. If we forget, it could happen again.

An embarrassing loss

Dear Editor:

The reason behind the Friends of Photography's decision to move their headquarters to San Francisco is almost too much to believe!

San Francisco's Mayor Feinstein is giving the group tremendous cooperation, welcoming with open arms the plan to establish the Ansel Adams Center there. In a statement to the San Francisco Chronicle she expressed her delight "since it brings this prestigious organization into San Francisco's unique and boundless cultural umbrella."

Rep. Sala Burton praised the "project that will keep the memory of Ansel Adams alive." Support has also arrived from former presidents Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter.

And what did our city officials do when the organization asked for help to keep the center in Carmel? For starters, the mayor let the proposal for future development of this project lie on her desk for months. According to Jim Alinder there was a definite no interest from the city. "Basically, Mrs. Townsend was not interested." The message was: "Carmel has enough culture." This is an outrage!

There was a time when the words "Carmel" and "art" were one. Serious collectors came here from all over the world. Now, for some strange reason, instead of controlling the quality of art galleries, we have a moratorium on them.

Some of the aforementioned collectors have told me personally that Carmel is becoming a cultural wasteland. And yet we still had this internationally known major point of creative photography here. The shame of it is that we didn't have that "unique and boundless cultural umbrella" to shelter and nurture Ansel Adams' dream. And so this prestigious gem is finding a more welcome home. What an embarrassing loss!

I am just one of the many practicing Carmel artists who look to Mayor Clint Eastwood as a modern day renaissance man who can restore our place in the sun as an important art center. Let us hope he can reverse this downward cultural spiral!

Having it both ways

Dear Editor:

You think 40 years doesn't change things. Delve into this recent movement to pressure Congress into paying reparations to those Japanese people interned during World War II under the War Relocation Act of 1942.

If Congress appropriates the money, each person who was interned under the act will receive some $20,000; one report said $25,000. The total cost is estimated at $1.5 billion.

One who was interned at that time, a writer named Shonin Yamashita, says that a somewhat similar demand was made in December of 1942 by the evacuees interned at Poston, Ariz.

According to Yamashita, the camp's resident representatives demanded $200 million, but they insisted that the damages be paid by the Japanese government. Communicating with Tokyo through the Spanish Consul in Los Angeles, the Poston camp's resident representatives demanded that the Japanese government pay each evacuee some $4,000 per year of internment.

Yamashita goes on to explain, "We all knew that the whole evacuation mess was caused by the act of Tojo government, not Washington."

Now, you can't have it both ways.

But isn't it interesting how a younger generation, 44 years from the scene, insists that it can see what happened back there in 1942 more clearly than those who were there?

Of course, the vision of a billion and a half dollars could have something to do with that.

Keep Big Sur Marathon

BY MOST accounts the Big Sur International Marathon was an unqualified success, both as a running event and a charitable event. But obviously it's not without its problems.

There's a chance that the first Big Sur International Marathon could become the first and last Big Sur International Marathon.

That would be a shame.

Granted the marathon didn't raise an outstanding amount for charity this year, but first-time charity events are usually lucky to break even, much less hand over the more than $10,000 that the Big Sur event raised for charity.

In two meetings over the past week (see related story this issue) Caltrans and California Highway Patrol representatives — the ones who have to make the tough, no-win decision of whether to proceeed with the event again next year — got responses that were worlds apart. Peninsulans heavily favored the race; Big Sur hated it.

Most of the opposition to the race came at the second meeting, held in Big Sur, from residents and especially businesses.

Residents were inconvenienced and upset that the event had taken over their community for several hours that day. Businesses smarted from the drop-off in visitors and cash flow.

"Big Sur charities are not the primary beneficiaries, but Big Sur people are the big losers," said one disgruntled businessman.

Okay, Big Sur is upset and perhaps some of those complaints are justified (don't you think the road closure had an added impact that few considered?), but the upshot is that Big Sur residents and businesses were invited to help and get involved in planning the race well before the race took place.

The response: disdain and disinterest. Two business representatives showed up for a joint meeting between race organizers and businesses almost two years ago. Even now merchants attending the hearing said they could not guarantee that the same thing wouldn't happen again.

This has all the makings of a "cut off your nose to spite your face" scenario. If Big Sur residents and businesses were truly interested then they would have gotten involved from the very beginning, even if it were simply to lodge their protests against the race.

Why didn't businesses work with organizers to lure runners (and their supporters) to Big Sur, to stay, eat and shop there before the race? Nothing was planned for runners or their supporters, who could have made up for the lack of visitors that day.

From all accounts organizers are willing to bend over backwards to meet some of the demands and solve some of the problems associated with the race. First-time events aren't supposed to go perfectly, although the marathon was mighty close.

Why can't Big Sur work with race organizers to iron out some of the problems? There's no reason why Big Sur charities couldn't benefit; there's no reason why the start of the race couldn't be alternated between Carmel and Big Sur; there's no reason the race couldn't start earlier and caravans run smoother. But these problems can only be worked out if both parties are willing to compromise and work out mutual problems; so far it looks like only one side is inclined to do that.

The Big Sur International Marathon is the type of Big Event that could rank alongside the Monterey Jazz Festival, California Rodeo, Laguna Seca races and the AT&T golf tournament. But it won't happen if the event can't get past the starting line.

And that would be a shame.

Redesign could save spaces

Parking still main issue with beach walkway

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A REDESIGN of the path width and less space allocated between cars would reduce the loss of parking spaces along Scenic Road if the city builds the Carmel Beach walkway.

That is according to an addendum to the final Environmental Impact Report (EIR) for the Carmel Beach Rehabilitation project. The report was expected to be discussed by the planning commission yesterday, May 28.

Parking — or rather the lack of it — seems to be the main issue over the plan to construct a five- to ten-foot walkway along the west side of Scenic Road from Eighth Avenue to the south city limits.

Re-aligning Scenic Road to provide room for the walkway will result in the loss of 77 parking spaces under the design now proposed. There currently are 146 spaces and once the walkway is constructed there would just be 69, according to the city's estimates.

For example, a survey in the EIR addendum reports that the busiest parking spaces are the 46 between Eighth and 10th avenues, yet 24 will be eliminated along that stretch if the present walkway design plan is adopted by the city.

But a change in the width of the walkway and smaller space between parked cars would reduce that loss of spaces, consultant Robert Royston wrote in the addendum to the EIR.

"The pathway could be moved to the west and/or reduced in width in some locations. This would provide additional width for more parking," wrote Royston, whose firm also designed the walkway.

"The proposed parking space design includes a standard 18-foot length and a four-foot gap between spaces. If this gap were removed and compact spaces were provided, still more parking could be accommodated within the project design," he continued.

However, Royston warned that such measures are not without drawbacks.

"This change may impact Scenic Road residents and drivers along Scenic Road by reducing their views of the beach and increasing traffic congestion as parkers move in and out of smaller spaces," according to the EIR addendum.

"This alternative would also increase the need for pedestrian guardrails along the west side of the pathway."

SURFERS HANG out on Scenic Road after a day on the waves. Parking for all of those groups who want to use the beach is a key issue as the city looks at developing a walkway. There are many residents who feel that they cannot safely walk on Scenic Road because of the traffic congestion problems. (Holly McFarland photo.)

When first proposed in the 1970s, the walkway was expected to cut 30 parking spaces from Scenic Road. The EIR addendum discusses at great length the reasons why that figure has more than doubled over the last decade.

"When the original pathway concept was developed, parking spaces along Scenic Road were not marked and the number of usable spaces could only be estimated," the EIR addendum states.

•

'IN 1984 parking spaces along Scenic Road were officially marked and the resulting number was significantly higher than any previously estimated number."

Erosion along the shoreline also has played a role, Royston believes.

"In the decade since development of the original pathway concerpt, the Carmel shoreline has been severely eroded by storm waves and uncontrolled rainwater run-off.

"These forces have resulted in the loss of significant portions of the bluffs and slopes along Scenic Road. With less bluff top area available, a greater portion of the pathway must now be located in the roadbed, resulting in the elimination of more parking than originally estimated," the report continues.

Walkway design features also played a role in adding to the loss of parking spaces.

"Additional parking loss resulted from beach task force recommendations to reduce the amount of guardrails, wherever possible, along the pathway.

"The city's building official has determined that the city must install a 42-inch-high guardrail wherever the pathway is located within five feet of the edge of a steep bluff...These guardrails are required to protect public safety," the report states.

But guardrails also block views, which is a major concern of Scenic Road property owners. To lessen the impact on views, the walkway was moved east so that 90 percent of the path is more than five feet from the bluffs. But, by moving the walkway east, parking spaces were eliminated, according to Royston.

The loss of spaces by area also is reported in the EIR addendum. Area and number of spaces lost are: Eighth to Ninth avenues, 12; Ninth to 10th avenues, 12; 10th to 11th avenues, five; 11th to 12th avenues, nine; 12th to 13th avenues, 17; 13th Avenue to Santa Lucia, 11; and Santa Lucia to the south city limits, 11.

The EIR addendum also reports that on the busiest days (sunny afternoons), all 46 of the available spaces between Eighth and 10th avenues are filled.

•

ROYSTON ALSO conducted a survey of parking spaces on random days between March 26 and May 11.

The busiest day was Saturday, April 19 when every space was filled from 2 to 2:30 p.m. And that same day from 6 to 6:30 p.m. all but four spaces to the extreme south were occupied.

The survey indicates that the most popular parking area is between Eighth and 10th avenues, where 46 spaces are available. On five of the 11 survey periods, all 46 spaces were filled.

More than half of those spaces between Eighth and 10th avenues will be eliminated under the current walkway plan.

The least popular time during the survey was 10 to 11:30 a.m. on April 4, a partly cloudy Friday when only 13 spaces were occupied all along Scenic Road.

Another controversial element of the Carmel Beach Rehabilitation project is whether to include public restrooms. One proposal would be to build the facility at 13th Avenue and Scenic Road.

In the EIR addendum, Rosyton responds, "The beach task force considered incorporating a public restroom in the project design. This facility would have been set into the bluff mid-way between the road and the beach."

To make it handicapped-accessible would have required extensive grading of the bluff, the report states.

"This concept was rejected by the task force due to the erosion problems associated with the grading activity, the difficulty of police surveillance of the facility, sewage pumping, facility maintenance, and the exorbitant engineering and construction costs."

Saks Fifth Avenue finds a home in Carmel

By NANCY HILLS

ON SEPT. 15, 1924, the first retail store north of 42nd Street opened in a well-to-do residential district of New York City.

It was directed at the "carriage trade" — a retailer's term for wealthy clientele. It featured in the window a $3,000 pigskin trunk, $1,000 racoon coats, chauffeur's livery and chauffeur foot muffs. The muffs were to keep the chauffeur's feet warm while driving around in the then-open air limousines.

And there were plenty of chauffeurs' feet to keep warm. In fact, a marquee on 50th Street lit up numbers to inform limousine drivers when it was time to pick up their shoppers and accompanying packages.

The store was the creation of a partnership between retailers Horace Saks and Bernard Gimble. It was named after owner Saks and the now-famed avenue on which it was located.

Sixty-two years later, Saks Fifth Avenue is still going strong in its original location on Fifth Avenue between 50th and 40th streets in Manhattan. And it is, of course, no longer the only retail store north of 42nd Street.

Heavyweight boxing champion Jack Dempsey may have been the celebrity draw at the ribbon cutting in 1924, but store records show that 4-year-old Lucille Petite was the first person to enter the store that would become a byword in the fashion world for style and class. Saks Fifth Avenue would survive through the Great Depression, World War II, the "baby boom" of the '50s and the turbulent era of the "flower children" and branches would open all over the United States. The records, however, do not show just what, if anything, Miss Petite purchased.

Now Saks Fifth Avenue is bringing its style and class to Carmel. Neither Lucille, Jack, Horace or Bernard will be on hand Saturday, May 31 when the doors of Saks Fifth Avenue open at 9:30 that morning at the Carmel Plaza, but that won't dampen anyone's enthusiasm.

"The charm and dignity that Carmel projects is the same image that Saks Fifth Avenue symbolizes itself," explained Richard Nastasi, manager of Carmel store.

The Carmel Plaza store will replace the Del Monte Shopping Center store, which opened in 1972.

"We feel we will be serving our customer better because this is where our customer base is located," added Nastasi, who also served as store manager in the Monterey store.

Both businesses and residents alike have looked forward to the emergence of the Saks' image in Carmel. Many people in the commercial district have said they felt the opening of Saks Fifth Avenue, a resident-oriented, low-key store with a reputation for high fashion, quality and good taste, marks a new era for the business community in Carmel.

"They're an extremely good merchant and that type of quality does nothing but enhance the businesses in an area," observed Jon De Mers, president of the Carmel Business Association. "I feel very positive about it."

Plaza stores, in particular, are looking forward to the opening of Saks.

Paul Allen of Allen & Co. on the lower level, summed up the feelings expressed by other Plaza shops owners when he said: "I'm thrilled. It'll be fantastic. It's just a part of the Plaza's plan to really bring in quality stores. To have a national retailer of the stature of Saks will be a real plus for everyone. Just peeking in the door (of Saks during construction) it looks wonderful."

"I think you'll find most of us are all pretty pleased," said Dolores Roberts, owner of Casa Dolores Gallery.

The new approximately 24,000 sq. ft. Carmel Plaza location is Saks Fifth Avenue's 41st store, according to information provided by its headquarters in New York. Its size makes it the largest store in Carmel.

Saks Fifth Avenue took over a location that formerly housed Joseph Magnin, which has been vacant since the J. Magnin chain's bankruptcy in 1984. Saks also took over the Plaza location of a contemporary housewares store, Byron & Schiller, adjacent to the vacant Joseph Magnin space.

Byron & Schiller owner Robert Brown retired and closed the store after working out an agreement with Plaza and Saks officials.

The vacancy created by Joseph Magnin made the move possible, Nastasi said. There was no other place in Carmel large enough to accomodate the store.

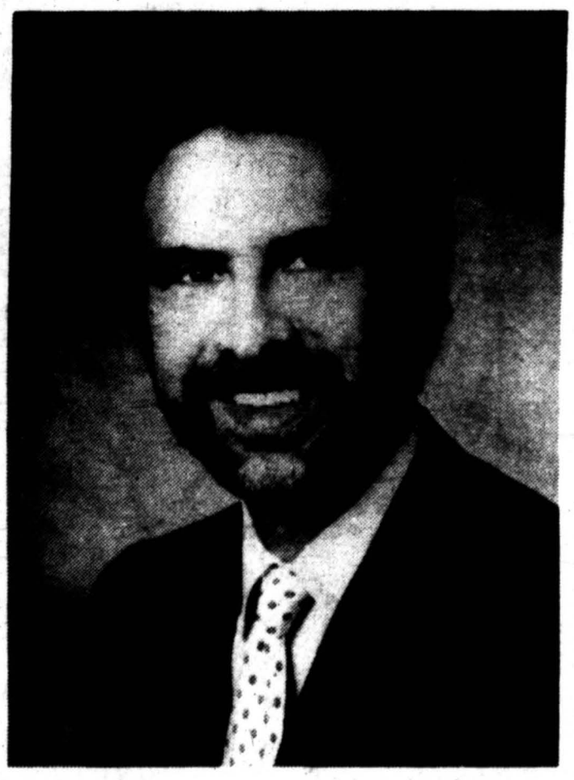
According to Saks the new store will offer "fashions for both men and women, with a strong emphasis placed on designer and better sportswear and dresses."

"The store will maintain the same merchandise assortment we had in Monterey," Nastasi said. "However, we are adding collections in the new store that were not available in the Del Monte store."

Some of those collections include Miss "V," Mani from Giorgio Armani for men, and St. Johns knits.

The two-story location will house a complete line of men's clothing on the lower level, in the former Byron & Schiller space. Men's lines Saks will carry include Polo, Bjorn Borg Men's wear, Generra, Perry Ellis America, Tommy Hilfiger and Saks own private collection label.

The lower level will also contain cosmetics and fragrances, fashion accessories and shoes, along with fashions for juniors, beachwear and active sportswear, and Saks exlusive "real clothes" for women who approach fashion with a "sense of practicality."



RICHARD NASTASI, manager of Saks Fifth Avenue in Carmel.

The upper level will concentrate on women's wear, with a designer salon, designer and better sportswear, coats, suits, dresses and Saks Fifth Avenue furs from Paris.

Designers represented in the designer salon include Adele Simpson, Albert Nipon, Diane Freis, Oscar de la Renta, Richilene, Rina de Montellla, St. John Knits and Victoria Royal. Designer sportswear comes from Adrienne Vittadini, Anne Klein II, Calvin Klein Classifications, Harve Bernard and Perry Ellis Portfolio.

An official description of the complete remodel states the store will "recall the architecture of the numerous missions in the Eastwood's appointments expected to be confirmed by the city council Tuesday afternoon are: architects Olof Dahlstrand and Fred Keeble, realtor Carla Ramsey, and newspaper publisher Bill Brown.

Commissioners expected to be replaced are: Chairwoman Sandy Swain, Gene Cava, Tom Nash and Marjorie Montelius.

Ken White, the newest member of the commission, having been sworn in Jan. 8, will be the only surviving incumbent, according to sources.

New appointees Ed Hicks and Bruce Roberts — who replaced Gene Hammond and Art Mertens when their terms expired this month — will be sworn in June 11 and will not be affected by the wholesale house cleaning.

•

IT IS generally thought that this will be the first time a new council will dismiss a majority of a commission before the terms of the members expire.

The wording for the agenda item is: "Consideration of removal of the members of the planning commission and consideration of mayor's appointments."

The past council did revamp the library board because certain trustees refused to quit criticizing the city over inaction on the proposed annex. However, each trustee was removed only when their terms expired.

Commissioners contacted indicated that they were not informed of Eastwood's plans and would prefer not to comment at this time.

"I'm stunned," said White, who also begged off commenting until he has had a chance to talk with Eastwood.

Except for Keeble, the proposed appointees all filed applications for planning commission between May 22 and May 27. Keeble had not returned his application by press time.

Eastwood did not return telephone calls for the past week and his aide, Sue Hutchinson, indicated that the mayor was "out of town on city business."

NEW CARMEL Mayor Clint Eastwood wants to clean house by dismissing four of the five current planning commissioners. Also on the agenda is discussion of a proposed parking garage at Sunset Center, above. (Holly McFarland photo.)

It is no secret that Eastwood had his problems with the planning commission. Often in his campaign Eastwood would claim that commissioners were rude and unresponsive to applicants.

The most recent incident involves Commissioner Tom Nash, who made some sarcastic remarks to businessman Paul Laub during a May 21 planning commission meeting.

Eastwood's downtown office and retail complex also was often delayed by the commission and it was only when he sued the city that Eastwood was able to win approval for the project through a series of political compromises.

City Atty. Don Freeman has advised that each board and commission serves at the whim of the council.

"All boards and commissions serve at the pleasure of the city council...In reality, the council can ask a board or commission member to resign or they could remove them."

The planning commission is not the only board that has terms to be filled by the council Tuesday.

The council is expected to appoint four members to the Community and Cultural Commission. Those whose terms are expiring are: Jean White, Roger Fremier, Suzanne DeClercque and the late Natalie Murray.

Appointments to the library board are also expected to fill the expiring terms of Bernard Anderson and Ron Kabat. The council also is to fill the forestry commission vacancy created by the death of John Davis.

The council agenda is nearly as large as the new council's initial meeting in May. Some of the other issues to be discussed include:

- Proposed design changes to Piccadilly Park on Dolores Street.
- Consider a parking sticker program for Scenic Road between Eighth Avenue and Santa Lucia so that residents can still park when the street is closed to parking one-half hour after sunset.

region. Soft heathers and sand tones are contrasted against natural stucco and glazed terra cotta tiles, along with three dimensional artwork and hand-thrown pottery." An atrium will highlight the upper level.

The Carmel store is one of nine locations in California, the first of which opened in 1938 in Beverly Hills. The Beverly Hills store was the sixth branch store of the original Saks Fifth Avenue store that Horace Saks and Bernard Gimbel opened in New York.

Unfortunately, Saks died in 1926. He never saw the wealthy residential area he chose to locate a replacement for his first Saks store, then on 34th Street, grow into one of the most important shopping centers in the world. Across the street now is the renowned Rockefeller Center. A Fifth Avenue address is obviously a plus for any retail store.

The reins were taken over by Bernard Gimbel's cousin and Saks' assistant, Adam Gimbel. He became the catalyst for Saks Fifth Avenue's expansion. He and his wife Sophie, Saks Fifth Avenue's fashion designer, retired in 1969 and owned the stores until 1974 when it was sold to British American Tobacco.

Saks Fifth Avenue's influence and power in the fashion world is reflected in the fact that Sophie Gimbel had the distinction in 1947 of being the first American designer to appear on cover of Time magazine.

The store will open its doors for the first time 9:30 a.m. Saturday, May 31. Regular hours are 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Saturday; 12 noon to 5 p.m., Sundays.

Toxic waste poses big problem for everyone

WHILE MANY Monterey Peninsula residents have long been aware of the problems caused by industrial hazardous waste, fewer people understand the real concerns surrounding the issue of toxic household waste.

Familiarity with household substances has bred a certain amount of carelessness. Because we use these materials daily, and have grown accustomed to having them in our homes, we tend to forget that they are composed of powerful chemicals. Safety rules are neglected when we use household chemicals: we don't wear gloves or goggles, or we fail to properly ventilate the room.

Unfortunately, we're equally careless about disposing of these materials. It's so easy to take the lid off the trash and toss the unwashed container in with the rest of the household garbage. And if we buy more of a chemical than we really want, our first instinct is to pour it down the drain. Both actions, repeated over and over in communities all across the action, are threatening our environment, our health and our safety.

Take, for example, the problem of household toxics in the trash. Many people are under the mistaken impression that sanitation workers are able to sort through the trash and remove the toxic materials before the garbage is buried.

In truth, local garbage companies are not licensed to handle toxic waste.

Another case took place in Yolo County, where a bottle of toxic acid — used in jewelry-making — exploded near a refuse collector. After the incident, several people who were nearby complained of throat and sinus irritations. And a refuse collector in Sacramento County lost sight in one eye after being splashed with muriatic acid, a substance commonly used as a swimming pool cleaner. Because of dangerous situations like these, the state health and safety codes prohibit disposal of hazardous substances in household trash containers.

Toxic substances poured down sinks and toilets pose another kind of threat to the community. Many people pour toxic materials down the drain, believing the chemicals will be neutralized when they cycle through treatment plants. However, treatment plants depend on bacteria and other living microorganisms to treat the water. Toxic waste kills these little creatures, and when the microorganisms die, the treatment process comes to a halt. The plant operators then have to wait for the bacterial colonies to regrow, or they have to import bacteria from another plant. In the meantime, the plant may not be able to meet water quality standards for discharged water.

Yet a third misconception concerns storm drains. Storm drains were designed to handle only overflow and runoff waters caused by rainy weather. Most water in storm drains is discharged directly into surface waters, without being treated. Any household toxic waste poured into the storm drains will be discharged into the local ponds and streams also, killing fish and plants, and polluting the waterway.

To make Monterey Peninsula residents aware of these dangers, and to provide them with a safe alternative for disposing of toxic waste, the Monterey Peninsula Garbage and Refuse Disposal District joins Monterey County, local garbage companies and sanitation districts in conducting Toxic Disposal Day on Saturday, June 14.

Housing assistance available to seniors

More than 300,000 elderly and disabled California homeowners and renters have begun receiving their applications for assistance, according to the Franchise Tax Board.

To qualify for homeowner or renter assistance, claimants must be at least 62 years old, blind or totally disabled as of Dec. 31, 1985 and have $12,000 or less in total household income in 1985.

The filing period began May 16 and runs through Sept. 2, 1986. Those claimants who have filed in the past two years are advised to wait until they receive their labeled forms before filing. Use of the peel-off label saves processing time.

Homeowners can receive from 4 percent to 96 percent of the property tax paid on $34,000 assessed full market value of their home. Renters must have paid at least $50 a month rent. Assistance ranges from $10 to $240.. This is a one-time annual assistance payment.

Checks will be mailed statewide beginning July 1, 1986, after the 1986-1987 budget is approved.

This year an estimated 225,000 renters and 80,000 homeowners throughout California will receive nearly $33 million, averaging $85 per homeowner and $166 per renter.

Last year 591 Monterey County homeowners received a total of $50,000 while 1,569 renters were paid $193,000 in assistance. The average homeowner received $100 and the average renter received $125.

Nearly 800 volunteer tax assistance sites are being established throughout the state to explain qualifying requirements and help with the preparation of claim forms. The location and hours of the nearest site can be obtained by calling the Senior Information and Referral Center at 646-4636.

Forms and information also may be obtained by calling the toll-free number of the Franchise Tax Board or by writing to Franchise Tax Board, P.O. Box 1588, Sacramento, CA 95807-1588.

Something to brag about

CARMEL HIGH can boast about two of its own this week: seniors Eileen Chow and Kurt Graham. Chow has announced she will attend Harvard University next fall, having turned down Berkeley and Stanford. While considering Berkeley, Chow was a "Regent's Scholar" as one of the 200 top freshmen to be accepted. She has been awarded an $8,000 Radcliffe Scholarship to Harvard. Graham has been awarded a $2,000 annual, four-year merit scholarship to Harvey Mudd College in Claremont. He is a straight-A student and has won numerous honors for his academic achievements over the past four years.

Record breakers at CHS

SEVERAL CARMEL High School swimming records fell at the Central Coast Section championships at Stanford University May 17-18. The four Padres (from left: Chis Spaulding, Mike Sandstrum, Greg Falge and Jim Sandstrum) broke team records in the freestyle and medly events. Mike Sandstrum finished fourth in the 50-yard freestyle and qualified for consideration for All-American status — honors that are announced in July. He broke the school record in that event and the 100-yard freestyle. Brother Jim also broke the school record in the 100-yard backstroke. The Sandstrums teamed with Spaulding and Falge to make up the relay team that broke the two school records.

Banker Donald Wiesner appointed to school board

DON WIESNER says it may sound corny, but he wants to be a trustee of the Carmel Unified School District as a way to serve the community.

Wiesner, a Carmel resident and vice president of Great Western Savings in Monterey, was the 3-1 selection by the board of education Wednesday, May 22.

He replaces Doyle Clayton, who resigned in early April. Trustee Pat Condren opposed his selection, having voiced support for Martha Carrick.

"It just sounds a little corny that I don't have any ulterior reason other than I think I can contribute," Wiesner said.

"I'm at a point in my life where I want to do something for the community and something for education," said Wiesner. "This isn't something I suddenly thought about. I've thought about it off and on for years. I've got the time to do the job now."

And he added, "Where I can contribute, I think, is my background as a banker. Maybe I have a different point of view that I can bring to being on the board."

Wiesner says he is joining the board during a period of stability in the district. "I have a lot of respect for this board," he said. "It's an easy time to step on the board right now."

But Wiesner does have some thoughts on his goals as a trustee.

"We've always had money problems. That's a concern I have — how best to use the funds we've got. The teachers are not paid enough, even compared to other districts," he said.

Wiesner also believes the district must help combat drug and alcohol abuse problems in the district.

Wiesner has been a resident of Carmel since 1974, except for a brief stay in Monterey. Two children from a previous marriage currently attend Carmel public schools.

DON WIESNER is the new Carmel Unified School District trustee, replacing Doyle Clayton.

Wiesner is a member of Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS) and the Carmel High School Boosters' Club. He also is a member of the Monterey Rotary Club, Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and the Pacheco Club.

He holds a bachelor of science degree in business from the University of California at Berkeley and received his master's degree in business administration from Golden Gate University.

Survey shows drug use among high schoolers is high

THE FIRST state-wide survey of drug and alcohol use among junior high and high school students in Califoria — recently released by Attorney General John K. Van de Kamp — shows that more than 51 percent of high school juniors have used illegal drugs and over 65 percent have been intoxicated on alcohol.

"The rising tide of drug and alcohol abuse among California teenagers makes them a generation at risk," Van de Kamp said. "I have warned repeatedly that we must reach these kids right now or make room for them in our jails and detox centers a decade from now. We've known the problem is serious. But we haven't know for sure just how serious — until now.

"I have some bad news for California parents," he added. "By the time our children are mid-way through the 11th grade, more than half of them have experimented with illegal drugs. And nearly two-thirds have been intoxicated on alcohol."

The first statewide study of alcohol and drug use among seventh-, ninth- and 11th-graders, the survey was commissioned by the attorney general last fall and conducted by Dr. Rodney Skager, associate dean of the Graduate School of Education at UCLA.

Skager, who has conducted similar studies for Ventura and Orange counties, surveyed 7,500 students between December 1985 and February 1986 in 87 junior and senior high schools throughout the state.

Among the major findings of the survey:

• "Experimental drinking begins early and is virtually universal by the time California students reach 11th grade," Van de Kamp said. "Nearly 58 percent of the seventh-graders in the survey had already tried alcohol. Among the 11th-graders, a full 85 percent — nearly six out of every seven students — had experimented with drinking."

• Over 65 percent of 11th-graders have been intoxicated. "For most students, the use of alcohol goes well beyond an experimental drink or two," the attorney general noted.

• The big jump in serious drinking appears to occur between seventh and ninth grades. "Less than one seventh-grader in six reports having been drunk, but just two years later nearly half of all ninth-graders have had that experience," he added.

Van de Kamp said that "sharp jump in substance abuse" between the seventh and ninth grades is "very consistent throughout this data.

"Clearly," he said, "the junior high years are a critical time when many young people take their first steps into what has been forbidden territory."

• Beer and wine are the most commonly used forms of alcohol at every age level. "Over 40 percent of the seventh-graders have already tried both," the attorney general said. "The use of hard liquor is much less common in the seventh grade, but it jumps sharply in the high school years."

• Experimentation with illegal drugs is common: "It is a sad and sobering reality that trying drugs is no longer the exception among high school students," Van de Kamp said. "It is the norm."

• By the middle of their junior year — with a full year-and-a-half of high school still ahead of them — over 51 percent of California students have tried illegal drugs.

• By far the most commonly used drug is marijuana — followed by cocaine, amphetamines, inhalants and hashish.

"Inhalants are the most commonly used drug among seventh-graders," Van de Kamp noted. Skager said in the report that inhalant use among young children is "a particularly disturbing phenomenon," because such substances contain hydrocarbons and other chemicals highly toxic to the brain cells of developing children.

"Younger children as well as poor children are particularly susceptible to use of cheap, commonly available inhalants such as gasoline and paint thinner," Skager said in the report.

Other findings of the report:

• The percentage of young people using illegal drugs on a regular basis is much lower than for occasional use, Van de Kamp said.

"Here again," he noted, "marijuana is a distant fourth among occasional users — behind beer, wine and liquor. Among daily users, however, it is used more than twice as often as beer and seven times as often as cocaine."

• Among 11th-graders, approximately one out of every 13 report smoking marijuana every day of the year.

• In terms of regional and ethnic differences, Van de Kamp found "some interesting trends," but no significant variations.

"Whites are more likely than any other ethnic group to use alcohol and marijuana," he noted. "Asians are less likely to use them than are other groups."

Regionally, Van de Kamp said, "we were mildly surprised to learn that predominantly rural areas in the north of the state show even higher usage of both drugs and alcohol than the big cities."

• Twenty-one percent of those students questioned in the survey said they obtained their illegal drugs from dealers. "The overwhelming majority reported that drugs are obtained from friends, either in school (the most common response), at parties or events, or from friends outside school," Van de Kamp said.

"Ultimately, of course, all drugs come from dealers," he cautioned.

"But it's quite clear that California's young people don't perceive that to be true," he added. "Instead they see drugs as commodities that are passed among friends."

Van de Kamp said there are "some silver linings in the dark clouds" of drug abuse patterns.

Nearly 70 percent of California's 11th-graders report that they have never used tobacco, he said, and "barely one in seven smoke as often as once a day" — numbers which are far below adult usage.

Van de Kamp said those statistics "may indicate that the intensive anti-smoking campaigns among young people in recent years are paying off."

He cited a Rand Corp. study which suggested that successful anti-smoking techniques be applied to drug abuse prevention. "If so, there may be hope for drastic reductions in the distressing numbers we are reporting here today," the attorney general said.

He noted a "second silver lining" in the "mere existence of this data" compiled in the Skager report. "Until now, we have had to work with limited surveys, anecdotal information and educated guesses," he said. "We couldn't even be sure whether the problem was getting better or worse, much less know its true dimensions.

"Now we have a rich source of data which can be analyzed in a number of ways and used as a baseline for judging the success of future anti-drug efforts."

Van de Kamp commissioned the study at the same time he appointed the Attorney General's Commission on the Prevention of Drug and Alcohol Abuse, which is expected to complete its report next month.

"As this survey makes only too clear, we have an enormous task ahead of us," Van de Kamp said. "Only a unified effort can succeed, and we must start right now. The numbers tell us what we already sensed: thousands of children are making life-threatening choices even as we speak. There is not a moment to be lost."

Copies of the state-wide survey can be obtained from Paula Higashi in the Attorney General's Crime Prevention Center at (916) 324-7863.

Recruiting new teachers tops Proj. 2000 agenda

ASK ANYONE in the know about who the best teachers in the Carmel Unified School District are, and no doubt the names of Joe Lowe, Ken Wiese and Fredrick "Buzz" Rainer will be on that list.

They also are on the top in terms of experience. Wiese, an industrial arts teacher at the middle school, has been in the business the longest in the district — 33 years.

Rainer, a high school English teacher, has been in the district since 1955 and Lowe, a kindergarten teacher at River School, joined the staff in 1956.

As a matter of fact, 17 of the 131 district teachers will be 55 years old by Graduation Day. Projections report that nearly half the entire district staff will be over the age of 55 by the year 1995, less than a decade away.

And thus is the troublesome dilemma for the Carmel Unified School District — how to draw top-notch teachers to replace those retiring over the next few years.

"We call it the graying of the district," explains Karl Pallastrini, who is chairing Project 2000, a task force that includes in its responsibilities the development of recommendations for teacher recruitment.

Project 2000 will be discussing some of the ideas when it meets at 4 p.m. Wednesday, June 4 in the Carmel High School library.

Part of the committee's discussion is expected to focus on money, a common subject in public education. The top pay for a teacher in the Carmel Unified School District is about $32,000 per year. The average newcomer will earn about $20,000 annually.

Placing that in perspective, the average home in the Carmel area carries a $200,000 price tag.

Teacher recruitment is just one of several agenda matters before the committee next week.

A proposal to offer a special core program for ninth-graders and an independent study course for juniors and seniors also will be discussed.

Plans to work with the Carmel Youth Center and city of Carmel on after-school programs for middle school students will be addressed.

Currently, nearly one-half of middle school students are children of working parents or come from a single-parent family.

Project 2000 will also talk about methods to provide a better integrated curriculum for all grades since what is required by the high school affects the middle school and what the middle school is focusing on affects the elementary schools, Pallastrini said.

Recommendations from the Project 2000 Task Force are subject to approval by the board of education.

The committee meeting is open to the public.

Mahroom controversy may be settled

THE LONG battle over density for the proposed Mahroom condominiums at High Meadow may be settled by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors June 10.

Supervisors are to review a report from the planning commission that recommends the county allow only 18 units on the approximately two-acre site.

The developer has been trying to push through 36 condominiums on the property.

High Meadow is the local term for a series of developments on property east of Highway 1 along Outlook Drive.

BEHIND THE LINES
BY MICHAEL GARDNER

No 'Friends' in Carmel

CARMEL, this so-called artisans' paradise where bohemians supposedly are a welcome part of its lore, has lost another treasured friend and a piece of its heritage.

Friends of Photography, probably the one organization most responsible for boosting the medium to its rightful place alongside sculpture and oils as a legitimate art form, has decided to vacate its longtime spot at Sunset Center for more hospitable pastures to the north, San Francisco's Fort Mason to be exact.

Friends, synonymous with the giants of photography and Carmel area residents like Ansel Adams and the Weston family, is as much an institution here as the Bach Festival, Carmel Art Association and Forest Theater.

The sad part is the reluctance on the part of the city to at least make an effort to try and keep the organization here.

Two years ago Friends approached the city about helping finance the proposed Sunset Center parking garage. You know, the one that just about everyone wants but so far no deal?

In return for helping pay construction costs of the garage, Friends wanted to build its facility and garden setting on top. Sort of like the library annex proposal over on Sixth and Lincoln.

But instead of trying to assist Friends in efforts to relocate, Carmel literally gave it a boot out the door. "Thanks very much. See you later...let's do lunch sometime," was Carmel's attitude.

The sentiment at city hall was that even more big bad tourists would come into town if Friends was allowed to expand. Do you honestly feel that there will be fewer tourists with Friends gone?

With that kind of provincial thinking, why doesn't Sunset Center encourage the Carmel Bach Festival to move north? How about those doctors' conventions at Sunset Center? Aren't the MDs clogging our streets?

There's a big difference between a Friends of Photography and a T-shirt shop; unfortunately those entrusted with the power to determine that have lost the vision of what Carmel is.

And because of that, Carmel has taken one step farther from its roots and one step closer to really becoming another Solvang.

WHAT HAPPENED TO...

The proverbial lightbulb went off over my head during the hearings on continuing the Big Sur Marathon.

What happened to the Run for Fun? I asked myself. After about $2,000 was raised last year to benefit various athletic and academic programs at the high school last year, the annual event disappeared with nary a press release announcing its demise.

Phone calls to those in the know revealed that the Run for Fun and the Big Sur International Marathon were scheduled for the same day, Sunday, April 27.

The word is that Run For Fun organizers opted to shelve the event, temporarily at least, until another date can be arranged or something is worked out with the Big Sur International Marathon.

HOW ABOUT THEM BUREAUCRATS

Speaking of the marathon, someone should go out of his (or her) way to thank Caltrans and the CHP for at least listening to those who support and oppose continuance of the race.

Two nights in a row the trio — Tom Pollock and Bill Todd of Caltrans and Capt. Jim Munson of the CHP — braved the emotional issue so that they can have a better understanding of how the community feels about continuing the race next year.

No matter how the mucky-mucks at Caltrans and CHP HQ in Sacramento rule, it's going to make a lot of people very happy and just as many unhappy.

But for now, thanks for at least listening. Too often the little people don't have an opportunity as the one provided.

WILL TEACHERS BUY IT?

Concerning Supt. Bob Infelise's plans to reorganize the CUSD central office, the big question is whether teachers will buy the plan.

Wielding more influence with this board than with previous trustees, word is out that teachers are worried about bloating central office with administrators while their own dollars don't go very far.

Infelise's plan is pretty much a one-for-one deal, but there are those who see Rich Hawkins' vacancy as an opportunity to decrease central office rather than maintain a status quo.

For now, Infelise wants a staff of Rosemary Montgomery, Vance Baldwin, Marvin Biasotti and Chuck Phillips. Biasotti currently is classified as an administrator, even though he is the district psychologist.

The position once held by Rich Hawkins would be traded off for Montgomery while Biasotti would be bumped up to some other duties.

Skipping the complicated math already reported in the news stories, basically this plan will cost the district somewhere around $10,000 — to help pay for a district psychologist to replace Biasotti.

If teachers lobby as hard as some say they are, this board will be in a tough predicament.

For one, trustees have promised to keep their noses pretty much out of administrative affairs. But on the other hand, this board has every intention of hiking teacher salaries so any increase in administrative costs does not look good.

Hope someone out there can think of a way out of this one.

A 'DEAR HERB' LETTER

Sometimes it's hard enough to find material for a weekly scuttlebutt, much less trying to hammer out something six days a week.

But still I found it a little surprising that San Francisco's premier gossip columnist, Herb Caen, stretched it a little one recent Sunday.

Herb's little ditty about our mayor went something like, 'Now that Clint's made ice cream cones legal, perhaps he will now be known for his phrase, 'Go ahead, make my sundae.' (Because of copyright infringement it's best that the exact wording is not quoted.)

This is the perfect spot to lobby for a new city bylaw, courtesy of an editorial cartoon vaguely remembered from the campaign trail. The cartoon has Clint holding a smoking Smith and Wesson and sitting in the mayor's chair. He states: "Proposed bylaw number 4534: Any journalist caught using 'make my day' will be shot at sundown. Any objections?"

Now that would really make my day. Oooops, now I've done it!

TIM GRADY UPDATE

Perennial public office candidate Tim Grady was a surprising no-show among the candidates for the vacancy on the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education.

Tim, who lost in recent trustee and Carmel mayoral races, said he didn't apply because it was not a public election. Tim's philosophy is that all matters of importance be placed before the public for a vote. Since he considers himself and the trustee vacancy an issue best left to the public, he abstained from filing for the vacancy after learning it was an appointed position.

Speaking of, Tim is boiling at Spin magazine and its latest characterization of the Carmel elections. Some unkind things were said about our local counter-culture hero, so Tim fully expects a retraction coming. If not, well, anyone know a cheap lawyer, he asks?

New principal for CHS is appointed

MARIE ISHIDA has been selected from 48 candidates as the new principal of Carmel High School.

Ishida currently is the vice-principal of Santa Cruz High School.

She will replace Joe Feldeisen, who chose to resign and resume his duties as vice principal of the middle school.

Council to get a budget lesson

THE NEW Carmel City Council will be introduced to the nuts and bolts of municipal financing in a special study session Thursday, May 29.

City staff will present to the council reports on how the budget is prepared and the ongoing municipal financial operations.

The council does not begin budget study sessions until mid-June. No action will take place at the meeting.

The study session will begin at 4 p.m. in the council chambers at city hall.

Rep. Leon Panetta to meet with his constituents

Rep. Leon E. Panetta (D-Monterey) announced today that he will meet with constituents Friday, May 30, from 1 to 2:30 p.m. at his congressional offices at 380 Alvarado St. in Monterey.

Residents wishing to discuss their concerns individually with the congressman may come to his offices during that time. Appointments are not necessary. Individuals will be seen on a first-come, first-served basis.

Planning commission's infusion of 'new blood'

By NANCY HILLS

ARCHITECT ED Hicks and Monterey Police officer Bruce Roberts have more in common than being Carmel residents.

As two of the first new appointments to an important city board made by Mayor Clint Eastwood and confirmed by the new council, they will be sworn in as Carmel Planning Commissioners Wednesday, June 11.

Their appointments replace planning commissioners Gene Hammond and Art Mertens, both of whose terms had expired. Hammond and Mertens served on the board for a number of years.

Eastwood said he chose to nominate new applicants "because I felt we needed new blood.

"I know Hammond spent a lot of time and effort on the planning commission but I felt he was from a different philosophy than my own," Eastwood explained.

He was tempted to retain Mertens, he added, but said that it was just time for a change.

"He had been on the commission for nine years, and that was long enough," Eastwood said, adding that he likes Mertens personally.

"I want to have a wide variety represented. I don't think that the north and northwest sections of the city, where Hicks and Roberts live, have had much representation," Eastwood said. "I also feel that the planning commission has missed not having an architect on it for some time."

Though Roberts worked on Eastwood's campaign, the selection had nothing to do with who supported whom, he said.

Roberts had expressed an interest in serving for quite some time, Eastwood said.

"Bruce seems very enthusiastic," he added.

Hicks' application, Eastwood said, was already in the city files. He remembered previously talking to him about architecture.

They were both "only two of many people I came across who expressed a willingness to help," Eastwood observed.

BRUCE ROBERTS

ED HICKS

RETIRED ARCHITECT Hicks believes that the planning commission is a necessary part of city government.

"Every place needs to have one (planning commission) in this modern world with so much possible growth," Hicks observed.

He became interested in serving on the commission and filed an application about a year ago, he said.

"I learned the last time I went before them on my own project they had no professional architects or planners on the commission," Hicks explained. "I felt they needed the input."

Most of his work as an architect, Hicks said, was done while working for 35 years at Pfluger Architects in San Francisco.

"It's the oldest architectural firm in the city," he added.

Projects Hicks said he worked on while at the firm include a "few of the buildings" at University of San Francisco, Stanford University, City College of San Francisco, University of California at Berkeley and a 1,000-car underground garage at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D. C.

He and his wife moved to Carmel 12 years ago, he said, though they had owned land in the town since 1945.

"Basically retired" is the term Hicks used to describe his activities now but said he still works on "small projects" like home designs and remodels, usually from an office in his house. One of those "small projects" Hicks said he designed was the Carmel Meadows home of Betty White and the late Allen Ludden.

To "strenuously control development" is the primary function of the planning commission in Hicks' opinion.

"I don't want the city to change any more than it has to," he stated.

The commission can accomplish that goal through the "control of the mass and design of a building," Hicks maintained.

It isn't necessary to spend so much time on details such as what color the building is and whether a sign is exactly what the city is looking for — as long as it meets the requirement, he added.

However, he believes that the aesthetics and look of a structure are important. Hicks said he points out to building and homeowners who don't understand why aesthetic controls are important that "you're going to live or work in the building, but you don't have to look at it."

In his opinion, people who have to look at a structure have as many rights as those who own it and sight is just as important as any of the other senses.

"It's interesting," Hicks said, "that people will notice a foul smell or noise but won't notice a bad design."

Buildings in town that Hicks said he finds particularly appealing are the Monterey Savings building on the corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue, the McFarland Center on the corner of Mission Street and Sixth Avenue and the Great Western building on San Carlos Street.

"Of course, everyone likes the library," he said, adding, "I like the older styles, too."

What he doesn't like, Hicks said, is the "cutesy pie" style such as Craig McFarland's Cottage Row on the corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue, though he added he appreciates the quality of work that went into the structure.

As for Eastwood's plan for a building on San Carlos Street near Fifth Avenue, Hicks said he has never seen the design, so he could not make a judgment on the city council and planning commission's denial of the project. The building was granted a permit by the council last year after Eastwood filed a lawsuit against the city, then worked out a compromise with the city.

He was, however, "upset" by the planning commission's treatment of the Little family's plan to rebuild their Carmel Sands Motel on the corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue. The commission voted to deny the project. The city council later approved a modified version of the project.

As the planning commission representative on the new General Plan Advisory Committee, Hicks will have an opportunity to review the city's zoning guidelines. The advisory committee was formed by the new city council to consider changes within the general plan. Hicks has been assigned to review the Housing Element in the plan.

Some of the concepts of the general plan, Hicks said, such as a buffer zone between the commercial district and residential district, are good ideas and basic planning concepts. However, he said he was not yet familiar with the details of the general plan and could not comment on it.

Of his new role, Hicks observed that the planning commission is a target for criticism and discontent because it must often say no.

"I guess I'll be a target, too," he mused.

•

CARMEL RESIDENT and Monterey police officer Bruce Roberts was originally a potential opponent for Eastwood in the recent mayoral election.

Roberts had filed as a candidate early on in the race, but dropped his candidacy when Eastwood filed. Had he stayed in, it would have been Roberts' second time as a candidate in Carmel. Two years ago, he ran for city council and lost by 12 votes.

Roberts said he had always intended to run in this year's election, but not as a mayoral candidate.

"My original idea (for this year's election) was to run for city council again," Roberts said. He said he decided to run for mayor when no one filed for the mayor's seat whom he felt reflected the political philosophy he was looking for in that position. However, when Eastwood applied, Roberts decided to put his energies into that campaign. But he never lost sight of involving himself in city government.

"I made it very clear throughout the campaign that I wanted to do something working with the city," he said.

He was interested in the planning commission because during the prior administration, he felt that Carmel was a "very close-knit city and didn't want anyone new slipping in that would ripple the water. The commission was just the way they wanted it."

The majority of people on the commission will still be those who have served for some time, Roberts pointed out.

The commission, he believes, should help people along rather than be a "reactionary group."

"As a resident, I want to be able to go and ask 'Is this possible, can it be done?' rather than the commission saying 'Bring us your plans and we'll change them as we see fit."

Roberts added he feels there should be a "sense of empathy" for residents who want to accomplish their goals.

"A city government should do everything possible to help them accomplish it," he said. "The commission has to have some sense of compromise."

While Roberts said he finds the general plan's "overall intent is positive" and he "applauds the people who put it together," there are sections he would like reviewed.

He is "absolutely in favor" of the recently formed General Plan Advisory Committee, particularly "now when so many areas (of the general plan) are being challenged."

One area of the plan Roberts said he feels needs a review and change is the residential district ordinances.

Roberts said that one ordinance states that even if the project has met all the design criteria, it can still be denied if the planning director deems it out of character with what he or she perceives is Carmel. That is much too vague and subjective, he believes.

"It (the plan) shouldn't have that phrase at all," he added.

However, Roberts added he approves of the general plan's zoning creation of a buffer zone between the commercial and residential district.

As for architectural style, Roberts said he doesn't think he has a preference.

"Cottage Row may have gone a little overboard," he said, "but people probably thought Comstock (buildings) were Cottage Row when they were first built."

In fact, he said, the general plan policy calls for creativity and for unique styles.

"And then the next thing it says is it doesn't want anything too unique or creative," Roberts commented.

The Harrison Memorial Library and Mediterrenean Market are two buildings in town he does like.

One zoning issue Roberts will have an opportunity for input on right away is the zoning ordinances for the R-4 district on the north end of Junipero Avenue.

"I'm not crazy about what I've seen proposed for the R-4 district," Roberts said, referring to the condominium project by Alan Williams for that area.

Though he won't be using his citation book at the planning commission meetings, Roberts said his training as a police officer in dealing with legal technicalities could be an asset. He is also committed to doing the best job he can.

"I've worked very hard in the past few years to do what I can for Carmel, and the planning commission is probably one of the focal points of the city," he observed.

Management for the future is important, he believes.

"(The planning commission in) Monterey went overboard letting people build. Carmel is trying not to do that. I'm not going to be able to please everyone, but, in good conscience, will do what is best for the city," Roberts said.

Changing student behavior

By KARL PALLASTRINI
Carmel Middle School
Assistant Principal

This year, a major change at Carmel Middle School has been the implementation of a school-wide behavioral modification program. The goal was first to establish a more positive school climate, and then to bring about a higher degree of participation and involvement on behalf of each student.

The first phase of the program established conduct or behavior grades in addition to the academic grade. Excellent, Satisfactory, Needs Improvement and Unsatisfactory were coded on the report card much the same as academic grades.

Students were required to maintain an "S" or Satisfactory average to participate in most school-wide activities and athletic teams. Last week, 74 students who all received "E" in conduct participated in a good conduct activity at the Racquet Club in Carmel Valley. Tennis, swimming and a barbecue were provided for those with outstanding citizenship. Hopefully this activity will involve more students and be scheduled each quarter.

In an effort to recognize our athletes and after-school sports programs, we established three evening sports banquets. Parents and students participating in interscholastic football, soccer, basketball, volleyball, golf and tennis contributed to a potluck dinner and received awards ranging from most valuable to most inspirational player.

The sports banquets provided a much-needed recognition for a program involving a significant number of middle school boys and girls.

A major addition to the overall program of student recognition was our first annual student awards assembly. One hundred and seventy-five students received awards from teachers and administrators in a special assembly including recognition for academic improvement, attitude, interest, helpfulness and excellence in class as well as for participation in student government and student of the month.

Each student was presented a Cougar award with a gift certificate from Baskin-Robbins for a banana split. The student awards assembly provided an excellent opportunity for teachers to reward students for their contributions for successful classroom participation.

The final phase of this year's activities program will be our first annual academic honors night, to be held June 10, 7 to 8 p.m. in the gymnasium.

All honor roll students will receive certificates in addition to awards for top students in math, English, history, science, foreign language and music. Carmel Middle School has an abundance of honors students and this much-needed activity will recognize a genuine strength area of our school. Parents and students are invited to attend a coffee and dessert immediately following the presentations.

An effective activities program at the middle school level attempts to recognize student, staff and parent involvement in a variety of areas. It is important for students and parents to be aware of an established and consistent activities agenda and to anticipate involvement in an area suitable to each individual's needs and interests.

We have made an effort this year, with the support of the teaching staff and parent-faculty club, to improve the student activities program and hopefully the overall school climate. We will continue to evaluate our efforts and provide opportunities for our students whenever possible.

Betty Plank ready to turn dreams into reality

By MICHAEL GARDNER

'I'VE SEEN too many people stay on too long and postpone too many dreams."

Betty Plank says it's time to turn her dreams into reality.

With that, Plank has announced her retirement as executive director of the Carmel Foundation.

But don't expect them to let her go without a little party, especially after serving for a dozen years and guiding the Carmel Foundation from a small house with 1,200 members to a large three-building facility with 3,600 members.

The board of directors will host a party for Plank at about 2:30 the afternoon of Sunday, June 1 at the Carmel Foundation, Eighth Avenue and Lincoln Street.

A spry 65, Plank says it's time to move on from her position at the Carmel Foundation so that she can devote some time to travel and consulting work.

First order of business on her retirement agenda is a "nostalgia tour" through the United States for about three months, Plank said.

Then it will be back to her home in Del Rey Oaks for her first "leisurely" Christmas in many a year. Past Christmases Plank has helped serve about 125 holiday dinners to Carmel seniors.

"After that I'm looking into several avenues involving seniors," she explained. "One is housing for middle income seniors and another is consulting for small cities the size of Carmel to start a foundation like ours."

She said several areas have expressed an interest in modeling a facility after Carmel's, which operates on private funds.

But don't expect Plank to completely disappear from the foundation. She plans to enroll in several of the 40-some classes the foundation offers each week.

Plank came to Carmel a dozen years ago after working in the social services field in Portola Valley. At one time she headed a federally-funded senior nutrition project feeding 2,000 people a week in San Mateo County.

The Carmel senior citizen program was called "Town House" when Plank first arrived here in September of 1974. It was just a small house on the west side of Lincoln Street just south of Eighth Avenue.

But it was a time of evolvement for the program, and plans for a new facility already had been laid.

•

WHAT IS now the activities hall was opened in October, 1974; Diment Hall was finished in June, 1975; and the administration wing was completed in December of that year.

Most of those construction costs were offset by a large bequest from the estate of Constance Diment, who left $500,000 for the program.

Town House soon became the Carmel Foundation.

Under Plank's leadership the Carmel Foundation expanded its programs over the next decade to where today the facility offers educational and self-improvement courses, serves lunches four days a week, has counseling services, operates two apartment housing projects and offers a residential care for seniors in a private home on Valley Place.

One of the keys to its success has been community support for the foundation, Plank said. She especially noted the Carmel Lions, Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs for their continual support.

And the facility has that special touch, Plank believes, that keeps seniors returning.

"We treat older people with dignity and they are not necessarily treated with dignity elsewhere," she explained. "By recognizing they are individuals with abilities and needs, we try and fill those needs."

One of the biggest problems confronting the elderly in the era of the nuclear family is loneliness. No longer do several generations live under one roof, or even in the same state for that matter.

BETTY PLANK in the home-like atmosphere of the Carmel Foundation. There will be a party at the foundation Sunday, June 1 to honor Plank, who is retiring after a dozen years as executive director. (Michael Gardner photo.)

And that is where the Carmel Foundation comes in — to fill that gap.

"What I love is seeing these people coming in here smiling," Plank said. "Even if they come in alone they usually leave with somebody. It's a place to form friendships."

As far as the future is concerned, Plank said she hopes that the city and county can expand its transportation programs for the elderly. Many seniors are afraid to go out at night because of the dark and uncertainty of getting home.

As part of that, Plank asked that those who live next to seniors to ask them if they would like to join them when going out to a movie or activity at Sunset Center.

As far as housing is concerned, Plank expressed hope that the city's proposed senior citizen housing project on Dolores Street will be expanded in density and is completed.

Big Sur Marathon's fate hangs in the balance

By MICHAEL GARDNER

LIKE THE wind on Hurricane Point, the Big Sur International Marathon has run into stiff local resistance and there is a chance that Caltrans and the California Highway Patrol will not allow the race to continue next year.

Caltrans and California Highway Patrol officials are expected to make a recommendation this week on whether decision makers at the Sacramento headquarters should approve a 1987 Big Sur International Marathon.

'What kinds of events do we want to encourage?' one marathon supporter asked. 'This is an event that leaves footprints and money and nothing else.'

A final decision is expected from Sacramento in mid-June.

"The way it stands right now, we're in a no-win situation. There's going to be some unhappy people either way," says Tom Pollock, district director in the Caltrans San Luis Obispo office.

Pollock and CHP Capt. Jim Munson are charged with the task of making the recommendation following two days of public hearings last week on whether the Big Sur Interenational Marathon should continue.

As expected, most of the opposition came from Big Sur businesses that already had been hit hard by the closure of Highway 1 to the south. Highway 1 just opened over the Memorial Day weekend.

Residents too voiced concern that they could not use Highway 1 for almost all of race day, April 27.

A scenerio they feared is an accident or fire where the emergency vehicles would be unable to respond quickly. Highway 1 — closed race day to traffic except for scheduled CHP-led caravans — is the only route between Big Sur and Carmel.

Equally adamant are supporters of the marathon, who pointed out that changes could be made to limit the number of hours the highway is closed and work with Big Sur businesses so that merchants can benefit from the more than 1,700 runners entered.

It was often pointed out that since the highway was closed fire trucks and ambulances would be able to reach emergencies much quicker than on a usual weekend when traffic is thick in both directions.

And, proceeds from the race benefit local charities. The committee appropriated $3,000 to charities and another $7,000 is expected to be donated.

Those were the common points argued during the public hearings attended by Pollock, Munson and Bill Todd, deputy director for Caltrans in San Luis Obispo.

The first meeting was held Wednesday, May 21 at Carmel High School where Pollock, Munson and Todd were greeted by an overwhelming number of comments supporting the marathon.

•

THERE WAS just one and a-half dissidents, both of whom spoke early on in the meeting.

Marvin Truby opposed the marathon, asking rhetorically "Who's the politician who authorized this so I can vote against him." Truby didn't elaborate.

Barbara Rainer of Carmel Meadows was the one-half of an opponent. She personally commended the marathon committee for doing a "wonderful job," but said her neighbors are opposed because of the highway closure.

The caravans ran late after the first one and it was difficult for people to get to church, Rainer said.

From that point on, the comments were all positive from the crowd of about 75, most of whom were marathon runners or members of the committee.

Pam Bonsper of Carmel pointed out that those living on the Monterey Peninsula "make concessions for visitors all of the time" and the race was a concession from tourists for the numerous local residents who ran the race.

She called the marathon a "stupendous accomplishment" and adding, "If this was the first time and it went so smoothly I'm sure it will be better next time."

Husband Don Bonsper said the tourists did not seem overly angry about waiting for a caravan. "I really didn't see anybody that was upset or mad."

Bonsper, citing the numerous peninsula sporting events primarily for non-residents like the annual rugby tournament and Laguna Seca races, added, "This is the first one that we can literally participate in and hundreds of us did."

Pierra Delfausse of Carmel said there was "far less" traffic on Highway 1 on the day of the race so emergency vehicles would be able to respond faster than on a normal weekend.

J. Chet Banta called the marathon "a community event" where residents who didn't run also became active through volunteering along the route or just cheering the runners as they crossed the finish line.

He recalled that one Big Sur lady ran alongside him with a batch of cookies she offered to runners.

John Clair, a staff sergeant at the Defense Language Institute, explained that DLI conducted a marathon within a marathon amongst themselves.

"I think a lot of time the military feels isolated, apart from things."

Clair asked that those who oppose the marathon to "give it a second chance. Become part of it. See if you don't see some of the positive the rest of us do."

Carmelita Garcia of Monterey said, "who's really going to lose if the marathon dies are the charities...The problems can be worked out."

ROBERT WELLINGTON of Carmel said that he found the traffic between Ocean Avenue and Rio Road "very distressing" on race day.

But then he added, "It's exactly like what I experience every afternoon about 4 p.m. and on Saturday and Sunday."

Wellington said it is "very short-sighted" for Big Sur merchants to complain about the loss of business since he believes in future years the racers will bring money to Big Sur.

Alan Lawson of Pacific Grove noted that the marathon raised funds for charity — money that could come out of taxpayers' pockets if not generated by private events.

'Would you rather have us (the marathon) pay it or ante it up every year as part of your tax bill?" Lawson said.

Lawson questioned, "What kinds of events do we want to encourage? This is an event that leaves footprints and money and nothing else."

As far as closing the road is concerned, Lawson said that there are 8,760 hours in a year and "we're asking you for the privilege to take six of them. That's the bottom line."

Fourth District Supervisor Sam Karas added that he supports the marathon. "If we can put people on the moon we can figure out how to move traffic from Rio Road to Big Sur...There wasn't one negative response. The calls I got were 'there are no cars on the road. Could we close the road every Sunday?'."

Karas suggested that the marathon begin sooner than 8 a.m. so that the road could be opened earlier.

Caltrans and the CHP received a different version in Big Sur the following night, May 22, when they met with residents and business people in the Grange Hall.

But there was a surprisingly few number, only about 35 who showed, and half of those were supporters of the marathon and members of the committee.

Ken Wright, a 15-year resident of Big Sur, said residents have to share the area 30 weeks out of the year now.

"The creation of the marathon is one more weekend taken from us, the residents...We have very few weekends that actually belong to us...They keep getting smaller and smaller and smaller."

Bill Probasco of Garrapata said it was a "very worthwhile experience...I think we're very much for it."

Kirk Gafill, manager of Nepenthe Restaurant, said, "on a business level it was pretty disastrous. We probably lost $6,000 that day alone."

•

GAFILL CONTINUED, "The people who suffered the most may have been a small group, but they suffered greatly. Big Sur charities are not the primary beneficiaries and Big Sur residents are the big losers."

Verla Younker of Big Sur Lodge said business was down "30 to 40 percent" because of the race.

'I object very strongly to keeping the highway closed for a sports event...This had nothing to do with Big Sur. Nothing at all except the name,' said one Big Sur resident.

Monique Bourin, owner of Monique's, said, "I don't think it should monopolize our highway and it's 110 miles in either direction. The Big Sur people really got the short end of the stick. We had all of the negatives to the marathon...I don't think it's fair for Big Sur to have all of the inconvenience and none of the benefits."

Bourin said she would continue to support the Big Sur River Run, a shorter annual race that is held in the state park.

Katherine Short of Big Sur said, "I object very strongly to keeping the highway closed for a sports event...This had nothing to do with Big Sur. Nothing at all except the name."

Short said the committee should run the marathon in Carmel or in Pebble Beach where residents have other access roads.

Lynn Jays of Big Sur also called the race "harmful to the environment" and was worried that the marathon would grow into a Bay to Breakers-type event, a San Francisco race that draws about 80,000-100,000 runners annually.

"We can't have any impact like that on the highway," she said.

"We're all for it," was the reaction of Duane Fissell, a volunteer with the Carmel Highlands Fire Department. The department received $1,000 from the marathon.

He said "that's a lot of money" when viewed in the context of a $5,000 to $6,000 annual budget.

"It's not right for our highway to be closed for frivolous things and in this case charities are frivolous things," said Marty Hartman, owner of Ripplewood Resort.

"It isn't like you can move two blocks up the street and miss the whole thing," Hartman said.

Ray Sanborn, who leases Ripplewood, added, "It definitely hurt our business. The timing is not good — just when you're through struggling through the slow period...I think basically the feeling here is that it's a town event for which we pay."

Members of the committee asked Caltrans to approve the race and allow them to work with Big Sur residents and businesses to solve the problems.

Some of the suggestions included: changing the starting time, alternating the finish between Carmel and Big Sur, promoting business in Big Sur, providing movable barricades so the highway is opened quicker, limiting entrants, and guaranteeing funding to Big Sur charities.

Council to get a budget lesson

THE NEW Carmel City Council will be introduced to the nuts and bolts of municipal financing in a special study session Thursday, May 29.

City staff will present to the council reports on how the budget is prepared and the ongoing municipal financial operations.

The council does not begin budget study sessions until mid-June. No action will take place at the meeting.

The study session will begin at 4 p.m. in the council chambers at city hall.

THE SPECTACULAR Big Sur coast and its Highway 1 was the site of the first Big Sur International Marathon run April 27. Caltrans and the California Highway Patrol last week conducted two days of public hearings on whether to continue the race. A decision is expected within the next couple of weeks. News notes:

Archer's bail may be lowered

DAVID ARCHER of Carmel, charged with the April 30 slaying of Ray Podell, will go to court again May 30 to try and have his bail reduced from its current $1 million.

Archer and his court-appointed attorney Frank Dice of Salinas appeared in court May 23 on a bail hearing.

The Friday, May 30 date was set to give Archer an opportunity to consider a proposal to lower his bail to $500,000 as long as it is cash and not secured by real property.

Archer's preliminary hearing — designed to determine whether there is sufficent evidence to bind him over for trial — also has been rescheduled from June 2 to June 16.

Police allege that Archer shot and killed Podell after Podell surprised Archer inside a vacant home in Pebble Beach. Podell apparently was at the house to replace broken windows.

Archer allegedly fled the scene and was arrested by police six days later in San Luis Obispo County.

District may buy new bus and portables

THE CARMEL Unified School District Board of Education is considering buying a new bus and portable classrooms now leased for River School.

Trustees will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday, June 3 in the Carmel Middle School library, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

On the agenda is a recommendation from Supt. Robert Infelise to use lottery funds to buy a new school bus. The estimated cost is $75,000.

Infelise also will present a proposal to buy the two Carmel River School portables for $40,000. The portables are now leased for $7,500 annually.

Trustees also are expected to approve a grant application that will ask for $500,000 in state funds to help pay for asbestos removal in the district.

Although some schools have material containing asbestos in the ceilings, there is no danger to students, Infelise stressed.

Trustees will also act on the administration-recommended 1986-87 school calendar. Under the proposal, classes would start Sept. 3.

The Pointer Sisters in Carmel?

THE POINTER Sisters, Boy George and Madonna all appeared on the Sunset Center stage Thursday and Fiday, May 22-23, to benefit Carmel River School. About $500 was raised from the program, entitled Superstars. The superstars actually were fifth-graders in Patrick Allan's River School class who put on the stage show every year. Caltrans sets public hearings on state highways

State Sen. Henry J. Mello (D-Watsonville) announced today a hearing to discuss traffic and safety problems on state highways in Monterey and San Benito counties scheduled for Thursday, May 29 in Salinas.

"My district offices receive numerous calls and letters concerning traffic and safety on our state highways. These problems have a major impact on our local economy and the safety of motorists," said Mello.

Caltrans' District 5 director, Tom Pollock, will join Mello to meet with local elected officials and the interested public. The hearing will provide an opportunity for the public to voice its concerns regarding safety and also to hear a review of the 1986-87 State Transportation Improvement Plan, and a status report from Caltrans on projects in the area.

The public is invited to attend this hearing on Thursday, May 29 at 7:30 p.m. in the Monterey County Board of Supervisors chambers, Church and Alisal streets, Salinas.

"Input from local residents is vital. It has always been a way to let your elected officials know your concerns. Transportation is one of the most important issues facing us in Monterey and San Benito counties," said Mello.

Crisis hotline implemented

Residents of nursing homes in California, their families, friends and others interested in their care now have a toll-free number to call for help.

The California Department of Aging has implemented a new toll-free hotline for residents of long-term care facilities, according to Alice Gonzales, director of the California Department of Aging.

"The CRISISline provides residents of long-term care facilities, their families or friends a means of contacting us directly if serious problems exist in a facility," said Alice Gonzales.

Through the Office of the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman, the California Department of Aging helps to resolve serious problems that confront older Californians in nursing homes. The problems may involve abuse, dietary considerations, medical care or other concerns.

The CRISISline augments the efforts of the statewide volunteer Ombudsman Program. Local ombudsmen are available in communities throughout California so that residents can speak directly with ombudsmen in their own communities.

"We know how frightening it can be for older Californians in long-term care facilities when a serious problem occurs and there is no one available to help," said Alice Gonzales. "The CRISISline and the local ombudsmen are here to help."

Residents of long-term care facilities, their families or friends can reach the toll-free CRISISline by calling 1-800-231-4024.

Host families sought for students

ASSE International Student Exchange Programs is seeking local families to host Swedish, Danish, Finnish, Norwegian, Icelandic, Dutch and German girls and boys, 16 to 18 years of age, coming to this area for the upcoming high school year.

These personable and academically select European teens are fluent in English, bright, curious and anxious to learn about this country through living as part of a family, attending high school and sharing their own culture and language with their newly adopted American families.

The exchange students arrive from their home country in August and return at the end of the school year in June. Each ASSE student is fully insured, brings his or her own personal spending money and expects to bear his or her share of household responsibilities, as well as being included in normal family activities.

The students are well-screened and qualified by ASSE. Families may select the youngster of their choice from extensive student applications, family photos and biographical essays. Students and families are encouraged to begin corresponding prior to the students' arrival.

The students are sponsored by ASSE, a non-profit, public benefit organization, affiliated with the Swedish and Finnish departments of education.

Families who would like to share their lifestyle with a European teenager and experience the rewards of this enriching opportunity should contact ASSE's local representative: Margaret Givens, 3050 Executive Drive, Salinas, CA 93907 or call her at 663-3416.

'Fr. Juan' was popular and well-liked figure

By HOLLY McFARLAND

THE REV. Juan Oronoz was more than a father, he was a friend to the entire Monterey Peninsula community from the Mexican laborers of Carmel Valley to the affluent millionaires of Pebble Beach.

"Father Juan," as he was affectionately called in the community, passed away May 19 during his annual visit to his second home in Deya, Majorca, Spain.

A memorial Mass will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 14 at the Carmelite Monastery where he had served as chaplain for many years. His longtime friend Fr. Milton Walsh of the St. Patrick's Seminary in Menlo Park will be the principal celebrant.

Our Lady of Mount Carmel in Carmel Valley also plans to celebrate a memorial Mass and has tentatively scheduled services for Sunday, June 15.

'He had unique qualities that allowed him to be a good friend and priest and know when to combine them. It was a special grace; to get into touch with our own humanism.'

Earlier that week, Archbishop John Quinn will celebrate Mass June 10 in San Francisco.

Fr. Juan was one of those special men of God whose love crossed all boundaries of the socio-economic spectrum. He was strong-willed, yet compassionate. He was spiritual, yet earthy. He was a pacifist, yet a man of action.

Those who came in contact with Fr. Juan did not forget him. And those who knew him, say that they have lost a dear friend with his death.

"Whether you were Catholic or not is insignificant. He had a way of reaching people that was great from any background," said Richard Falge.

"He didn't build a big monument to himself. He just did deeds; quiet acts of love," Falge continued. "Right now he's probably telling the angels what to do."

To Brian Kelly, Fr. Juan touched his life when his first wife was seriously ill. It was the father who gave the family strength.

"He had unique qualities that allowed him to be a good friend and priest and know when to combine them. It was a special grace; to get into touch with our own humanism," Kelly explained.

"I first met him when he came to talk to my first wife who was dying of cancer. He let her have a love affair with the Lord in the last five months."

Phil Coniglio Jr. first met Fr. Juan when he was searching for a sense of God and His meaning.

"Fr. Juan was just put in my path. He kept coming into my life. He just encouraged no matter where we were at. He would always up lift you. He would never condemn you," Coniglio said.

•

CONIGLIO said Fr. Juan had a special knack of placing Christ into everyday life.

"He loved dancing and he would relate God's creation as the world dancing. He said something about wine. The water looked up to God and it blushed and it became wine. He was really gifted in speech and he painted pictures. He brought everything to life. He didn't get heavy into the theological," Coniglio said.

Coniglio remembers Fr. Juan as a sharing man, who often would take he and his wife, Star, to dinner or bring him little gifts.

"He liked younger people because they made him feel younger. He was always young at heart. He would never be bitter about anything. He'd always look at the good side of something...The thing he did is that he looked for the good in people and he brought that out.

'He didn't build a big monument to himself. He just did deeds; quiet acts of love. Right now he's probably telling the angels what to do.'

"He had a real gift that way. We have different gifts. Some people can paint, some people can dance. But he had a gift with people."

Star Coniglio remembers Fr. Juan for his time he would spend with her.

"He always stressed the love of Christ and that Christ loved you and that if we could carry that love in us and share it with one another that's all that needs to be to make things work," she said.

"He gave me instruction before I was baptized Catholic," Mrs. Coniglio continued. "I would go there about five in the afternoon...and we would sit there and watch the sunset and talk about Christ. It was a quiet, intimate sharing time."

Craig McFarland describes Fr. Juan as his "spiritual mentor" who was a "great solace to everyone."

"The way to describe that man is that he was just a fountain of love," McFarland said. "We're all the worst for not having that positiveness."

"I'm feeling a void in my life," said Gerald Traynor. "He was a giant. He was my best friend and mentor. He was

CONSCIENCE OF CARMEL

BY GUNNAR NORBERG

The drumbeat of doom

AS I SIT DOWN once more to write about an ever-recurring nightmare possibility — the desecration of the sylvan Hatton Canyon by driving a freeway down its steeply sloping length — I hear a steady drumbeat of doom. And it is, as it has been for so many years, a clearly avoidable doom.

Here I am, of course, thinking about what the Caltrans engineers from San Luis Obispo recently told the Carmel City Council about highway traffic problems in the Carmel area and about the way in which they could be solved.

The engineers promised to have a required Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) ready for public review by the end of July. This EIS would deal with facts bearing on Caltrans highway building plans for the Carmel area.

Ken Jones, the project engineer who made the case for a freeway in the Hatton Canyon, said if it were to be decided upon he would do the designing of the freeway and that that task would take a year and a half. After that, said Jones with a sigh of anticipated relief, he would happily retire.

However, Jerry Laumer carefully interposed, there was still no certainty that Caltrans headquarters would eventually decide to build the Hatton Canyon Freeway. And it was Laumer who headed the group of Caltrans engineers who spoke at the Carmel city hall.

Laumer then introduced the next speaker, Mike Mortenson, who described the alternative traffic solutions along existing Highway 1 which were being considered and which would be substantially less costly than that Hatton Canyon Freeway project.

Those various alternatives ranged in estimated cost from about $2.5 million to a little more than $8 million, while the cost estimates for a Hatton Canyon Freeway (in 1989 dollars when construction would start) had been projected various times at anywhere from $23 to $29 million.

After talking about those lower-cost alternatives to a Hatton Canyon Freeway, Mortenson was as disposed to dismiss them as mere "short-term Band-Aid solutions" as had Ken Jones, the Hatton Canyon Freeway advocate, who had used the same Band-Aid terminology to derogate them.

It seems to me that those alternatives to the dreaded Hatton Canyon Freeway should not be so lightly dismissed. I did in fact feel that Alternative No. 4, at a projected cost of just over $3 million, deserved serious attention. That alternative would add two lanes, one northbound and one southbound, to the existing two lanes between the Ocean Avenue and the Carmel Valley Road intersections along Highway 1.

It was in the 1960s, after freeway construction had stopped short of the Carpenter Street intersection, that the addition of two more lanes to Highway 1 was first considered, and then actually added in the early 1970s.

At that time Caltrans engineers had dubbed that widening a short-term solution which would handle traffic growth for a mere five years. Instead, it is still handling traffic — between the Carpenter Street and Ocean Avenue intersections — at least passably well nearly 15 years later.

Therefore, in my view and that of many other opponents of a massively destructive Hatton Canyon Freeway, it would seem worthwhile to try what Caltrans engineers dub a mere short-term, five-year-or-so stopgap solution by simply adding two more lanes between the Ocean Avenue and Carmel Valley Road intersections.

Maybe the usefulness of this would last for 10 or even for 15 years, as has that two-lane addition in the early 1970s. Certainly it's worth trying when the projected price tag is a relatively modest $3 million, instead of committing an amount which could be nearly 10 times as high, while at the same time destroying the forested Hatton Canyon. This just to open the way for yearning developers from here and everywhere whose only intent would be to line their pockets instead of what I and many others have tried to do — save this emerging Shangri-La for generations to come.

•

HERE IT MAY be useful to look back to glimpse the anger and anguish which were roused on a massive scale as the 1960s approached and the freeway construction eventually came to a grinding halt short of the Carpenter Street intersection along Highway 1.

Here is what Allen Griffin (founder and long-time editor of the Monterey Peninsula Herald and once publisher of the Carmel Pine Cone) said April 6, 1959:

"Now that the Carmel Hill has been scalped of its pine forest, to the horror of all except those who love concrete more than nature, the next step will be even more startling — the removal of the high land, in order that the freeway will have a reduced grade, long radius curve, structures and other adornments.

"Time will tell what effect the removal of this mass of land will have upon the climate of Monterey. A wide channel for wind and fog will have been created.

At threatening times in the past even caring ex-Carmelites, whose career decisions had taken them far away, have expressed deep concern for the survival of community values they had found here but nowhere else. In 1959 one such ex-Carmelite, Ernst Bacon, then the honored professor and composer-in-residence at Syracuse University in New York, said in a letter to the Carmel Pine Cone:

"Once a resident (and even a participant, perhaps too long ago to be remembered, in Carmel's musical life), I have since never missed an opportunity to revisit this most charming of American residence towns. Going over the hill from Monterey seemed to transport me suddenly into a very special world of arrested beauty: a world that respected the past, that savored its trees, its shore, its little river, its hills, its Mission.

"Now one of our land's most exquisite regions is about to fall prey to the Detroit dragon. The vast piece of surgical butchery on Monterey Hill is (I fear) only a beginning. Monsters will shake mansions to their foundations, foul up the air, grind out thought-shattering noises, cause all living things to cower at the roadside, and brutally sweep aside the amenities of living that stand in the way of these creatures' mechanical wrath. Do Californians pay the nation's highest gas taxes only so that no place is safe from the bulldozer?

"What about our freedoms? Have we no right to quiet, to privacy, to the enjoyment of unspoiled nature, to pure air and clean water? Are the eye, the ear, the nose to be ever more outraged only so that we can indulge ourselves in the titillation of playing the human bullet?"

Here you have seen something of the wrath and the anguish which were expressed in 1959 when the bulldozers roared over the top of Carmel Hill as public outrage mounted and before massive public pressure brought freeway building to a standstill before it reached the Carpenter Street intersection. Hopefully it can stay at a standstill if the present drive to start that feared Hatton Canyon Freeway can once more be blunted.

everything, all inclusive. He was charismatic, a leader, a diplomat."

Traynor said Fr. Juan "marched to a different drummer," but it was always on the side of good. "He was a modern day Thoreau."

Lucy Zarazua said Fr. Juan was a key figure in the lives of the Mexican families in Carmel Valley. He often said Mass in Spanish for the parishioners and counseled the young people.

"I still cry every time I remember him. He was so nice to me and everybody."

•

A SPECIAL Mass was offered for Fr. Juan during the annual crowning of the statue of the Immaculate Heart of Mary in Carmel Valley Sunday, May 25.

Lay speaker Robert Zeiner compared Fr. Juan to Fr. Junipero Serra.

"Fr. Juan Oronoz, like Fr. Junipero Serra, was a true son of Carmel, a man of peace," Ziener told the approximately 35 celebrants.

"Even though neither were Carmelites, both were deeply involved in the spirit of Carmel, after which this coastline is named. Since the Holy Father (the pope) plans to be here next year to honor Padre Serra, it is worth noting the similarities of these men who left a mark in their time.

"Both were men of peace, men of love, men of action. Both worked with remarkable ease between the Spanish and English cultures. Both were full of zeal to serve God," Ziener said.

"Fr. Juan will always be known as a man of peace, a man of love. And this statue will always remind us, inspire us and motivate us to spiritual peace and love ourselves."

Giving license

THE CARMEL Business License and Code Review Board will probably be dissolved after the June 3 Carmel City Council meeting, but it wasn't soon enough for Royal Adams.

The council will have its second reading of the ordinance to dissolve the board, and if it goes through, the BL&CRB will be no more after 30 days.

However, Royal and Robert Adams could have wished it was sooner. The Adamses are selling Adams Pot Belly Stove on Fifth Avenue between Mission Street and Junipero Avenue. An application for a business license by potential buyer Willaim Jenkins was filed with the city and came before the BL&CRB May 22.

When Jenkins approached the board, Rosemary Blackstone, the Carmel Business Association representative and chairwoman pro tem, asked him what his background was. Jenkins explained that he was from Florida and had sold construction equipment with a partner. Now he was retired and was buying Adams Pot Belly Stove as a means to move into the area. Blackstone pointed out that he had filed an application in a previous meeting for Jordan's restaurant, a deal that wasn't completed.

Board member Dottie Lillard, asked Brian Roseth, assistant city planner, if the business needed a use permit, meaning it would have to go back to the planning commission.

While explaining to Lillard that the shop was already existing in the Service Commercial District, Roseth said that there were not a lot of gift stores in that area, " it's probably hard to make it a go (in that area) because it doesn't get the kind of foot traffic." Foot traffic a gift shop usually needs.

Blackstone immediatly responded that it's a "terrible location" and looked at Jenkins.

"Do you realize you're in a terrible location?" she asked Jenkins.

Roseth, responding to Blackstone's comment, added, "if merchandized well" a gift store probably can make it in the location.

The business license was granted after the BL&CRB was told by Roseth that the matter did not need to go before the planning commission.

The next day Jenkins cancelled a meeting with the landlord and that weekend he informed Don Bowen, the real estate agent, that he did not want to purchase the business, naming other reasons than the licensing board's comments for his change of mind.

Royal Adams, however, said that there were no problems until the board meeting.

She added that she felt "incredulous horror" when she heard board members' comments

"We are discussing with lawyers whether or not to sue the city and/or individuals. We certainly have suffered slander and damages," she said. She has been doing business in that area for eight years, she added, and found it sufficient.

The sale of Adams Pot Belly Stove was the last thing that she and her husband had to do before they left for Oregon, where they have purchased a ranch. They have sold their ranch in Carmel Valley and have to be out by Aug. 1, Adams explained.

Royal Adams has written a letter to Mayor Clint Eastwood asking for some action and condemning the actions of both the staff member, Roseth, and Blackstone.

"Whatever the reason the remarks were made by Brian

Car care program available

In an effort to help motorists drive safer, more efficient vehicles, the California State Automobile Association (AAA) has initiated a major new public service — The Free Car Care Program, which will travel throughout northern California and Nevada.

The highlight of the new Free Car Care Program will be a free car check performed by CSAA staff auto technicians. The car check takes about six minutes per car. It will be an actual check of car's fluid levels, tire pressure, lights and other safety-related items, as well as providing a fuel economy test. No repairs are performed.

The car check as well as all other aspects of the new Free Car Care Program are performed as a public service, free of charge, on a first-come, first-served basis. AAA membership is not required.

The program was developed as a result of the increasing number of motorists who no longer get full service with their fuel purchases. The goal of the Free Car Care Program is to help these drivers become more self-sufficient in the routine maintenance of their automobiles that used to be performed at the full-service islands.

To help motorists gain self-sufficiency, the new CSAA Free Car Care Program also includes free handout material such as a car care booklet, a maintenance log, safety literature and a written record of their own car's car check results.

The new CSAA Free Car Care service is provided through a specially-equipped van, which travels throughout the CSAA territory of northern and central California.

The van is usually set up in the parking lot of a conveniently located shopping center. Motorists can identify the bright yellow van by a banner above it that proclaims, "Free Car Check," which is the focal point of the overall program.

Motorists can drive up to the Free Car Care van and get a free six-minute car check on a first-come, first-served basis. It is a free public service. AAA membership is not required.

The location and operating hours of the new CSAA Free Car Care program will be announced through the local media. Motorists can also call the CSAA district office in their area for this information.

The California State Automobile Association has found from thousands of its diagnostic clinic tests that a significant number of automobiles are badly in need of added tire pressure, engine, transmission and power steering fluids, and general under-the-hood maintenance. The CSAA has also found a definite relationship between low exhaust emissions and good fuel economy.

The CSAA Car Care Program is designed in increase motorist awareness of the need to regularly check these items.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER

Tortilla lovers take note. The Hacienda Restaurant, a Mexican restaurant on the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue, is changing hands. New owner as of June 16 will be Jack Brushert who is buying the restaurant from present owner Larry Jones (via Don Bowen of Carmel Business Sales).

Brushert formerly owned Togo's, an eatery in the Northridge Mall in Salinas. In an interesting turn of events, Brushert said that after owning a restaurant in a mall, where he found it extremely restrictive, Carmel is a relief.

"In a mall, if you blow your nose, you have to get permission," he said. Get this. He added, "For me, coming to Carmel is getting a little bit of freedom." Nice touch.

Brushert said it will take at least a month to a month and a half to "get up to gear," which means find out what the restaurant is like and decide what changes need to be made. Until he knows that, he won't have a grand opening.

The Hacienda, located downstairs in the Del Dono Court, has a "nice peaceful atmosphere," Brushert said. He wants improve it with a change of lighting, new carpeting and let more people know that the restaurant is there. The parking lot across the street, where a senior citizen housing complex is scheduled to go in, will be a big help this summer he believes.

As far as food goes, Brushert said he doesn't think it will be difficult to offer a good product. He plans to institute lunch with a less expensive selection than the dinner menu.

Since Brushert and I attended the same college — at the same time, no less — I'm sure he will do well. Only the best, you know. Of course, I didn't graduate from there, but still, I certainly got an education.

CHANGES IN PARADISE

There might be, possibly, could happen, but then again maybe not, changes in PhotoArt located in Paul Laub's Paradise Mall on the corner of Ocean Avenue and Dolores Street.

The lease is up for renewal and I hear owner Marty Fox is trying to sell it. Fox is a certified public accountant who lives in the Los Angeles area. Apparently, there are interested parties, but the lease runs out May 31.

Laub would like to move the developing equipment machine downstairs — something he feels would be more cost effective — but said if someone wants to pay the price, it can stay upstairs.

It appears to be all a matter of finances. So what else is new in the world?

CRYSTAL CLEAR

Gary Kalman has sold his Crystal Fox on San Carlos Street near Sixth Avenue on Cottage Row with the help of Earl Meyers from Herma Curtis Realty.

The new owners are Anne and Dean Vittetoe who will come down from Burlingame to take over the fine crystal shop.

Dean Vittetoe is leaving his job as division merchandising manager for Emporium Capwell to fufill his dream of owning his own store. After 17 years in retail, Vittetoe said he felt it was time to make his move.

Vittetoe said his job with Emporium Capwell involved overseeing nine buyers for the homewares department. That included "table top" items such as crystal and silver and housewares items such as kitchenware. He bought for 22 stores.

The Crystal Fox, he said, is not scheduled for any major changes, maybe just more of an emphasis on residential needs and bridal gifts. He will continue carrying Lalique, Baccarat and Waterford as the key lines for the store.

He also plans to add some unusual, one-of-a-kind items from France and Italy. Some new lines might be introduced in the fall, Vittetoe added.

CRYSTALLIZING THEIR dream of a business of their own, Anne and Dean Vittetoe are buying Crystal Fox on San Carlos Street near Sixth Avenue. What six-month-old Leslie Vittetoe's role will be in the store with all that wonderful glass remains to be seen. But we're all holding our breath. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Another interesting addition will be the Vittetoe's six-month-old daughter Leslie. I'm assuming she will be the quality inspector, especially when she's old enough to walk. She may even make a few additions for the sale table.

As for Kalman, he's headed north to San Francisco where he said he will open another fine crystal shop.

"Scared to death" and "died of a broken heart" are not just figures of speech, according to the Reader's Digest. In one study, about 20 percent of people who suffered sudden cardiac arrest had experienced acute psychological stresses in the preceding 24 hours.

Starting early

High-rate offenders called superfelons start early, states the Reader's Digest. Research shows that these career criminals begin by age 13 and hit their peaks as robbers and burglars around 16.

According to a Reader's Digest/Gallup Survey, religion is playing a more important part in our lives these days. The poll reveals that 51 percent of Americans are more interested in spiritual and religious matters today than they were five years ago.

CRANK UP YOUR VCR

From a French bakery to a video store may seem like a quantum leap, but think about. Both offer something that isn't absolutely necessary for survival, but is oh-so-fun, is strictly up to one's taste, and too much of either product isn't good for your health.

Anyway, Fifi's Bakery on Mission Street next to the Red Lion Tavern and Ron's Liquor is turning into a video rental store called Carmel Video Rentals. It's owned by Ron and Mark Pollacci, which is convenient because Ron owns Ron's Liquors too.

Mark Pollacci explained that in many of their other non-Carmel liquor stores, they rent videos. In Carmel, it will be a separate operation.

Mark Pollacci said the store will offer "close to 1,000 movie titles" at this time and is concentrating on "all the hottest releases and classics." Until they know what the market is here they will not put in many of more specialized items such as foreign films.

"We won't have any X-rated," he added.

The store will also have VCRs for rent and some accessories for purchase, Pollacci said. There will also be a 24-hour drop for rented videos.

CONGREGATION BETH ISRAEL SYNAGOGUE FUND-RAISER

Members of Congregation Beth Israel in Monterey have planned an exciting evening for Saturday, May 31 at the Monterey Sheraton Hotel, to raise funds for the new synagogue to be built in Carmel Valley. The theme of the event, "On the Move," signifies the growth of the Jewish community on the Monterey Peninsula.

The evening begins with cocktails and a silent auction at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 8 p.m. and a live auction, conducted by Butterfield & Butterfield Auctioneers.

The Acquisitions Committee has been hard at work collecting wonderful and exciting items for both auctions. The full evening's entertainment, including the sit-down dinner, is $25. For information and reservations call the synagogue office at 375-2759 or 646-8234.

HIGHLANDS INN RECEIVES FOUR-STAR RATING

The luxurious new Highlands Inn, dramatically situated overlooking California's Big Sur coast, has been awarded "Four Stars" from the Mobil Travel Guide.

"We at Highlands Inn are delighted to receive such a prestigious award," said Peter Komposch, general manager, "especially since we've been fully open less than a year since completing a comprehensive renovation."

A four-star rating from the highly respected Mobil Travel Guide is assigned to properties judged "outstanding — worth a special trip."

Four-star businesses "are described in superlative terms and far exceed normal expectations in design, level of luxury, service, elegance and uniqueness," according to the guide.

Of 22,000 resorts, restaurants, hotels, motels and inns nationwide evaluated annually by Mobil Travel Guide representatives, only two percent are awarded four or five stars.

Originally built in 1916, Highlands Inn is located four miles south of Carmel on a wooded hillside with panoramic ocean views.

CAL POLY TEAM RECOGNIZED IN MATH COMPETITION

A team of three Cal Poly students, including one from Carmel, was among the semifinalists in a nationwide competition in the daunting field of mathematical modeling.

The team of Daniel C. Cohen, Eliot M. Fried, and Daniel N. Kabat was one of 25 teams receiving a Meritorious Award in the 1986 Mathematical Competition in Modeling funded by the U.S. Department of Education's Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education.

Cohen is a senior math major from Carmel.

More than 150 teams representing 137 U.S. and Canadian colleges and universities registered for the competition and were given a choice of two problems to solve over a weekend. Solutions were submitted by 118 of those teams. Papers written by eight of the 25 Meritorious teams were chosen as outstanding, the top category.

The Cal Poly team of Cohen, Fried and Kabat worked as much as 16 hours a day for three days to solve the problem, write their 25-plus-page report and mail it by the deadline. The problem they chose to tackle asked where in a community two emergency-response facilities should be built, given statistics on where emergencies occurred in the previous year.

Mathematical modeling is a method of solving real-world problems by interpreting them mathematically. The problems at first might not appear to have a mathematical solution. The challenge is to build and solve a mathematical interpretation that "models" the situation realistically.

STATE HEART ASSOCIATION ELECTS AREA RESIDENTS

Three area residents were elected to state American Heart Association volunteer positions at the May 17 California affiliate meeting in San Jose. Margaret Butterfield, R.N., of Monterey, was elected to the board of directors for a two-year term and Robert G. Van Horne, M.D., of Salinas, for a one-year term. Judge William D. Curtis of Monterey was elected to serve as Southwestern regional representative.

Carolyn Rice of Carmel, who is the public relations coordinator for the Central Mission Trails (CMT) Chapter, was awarded the Staff Achievement Award for the state by the California Staff Society of the American Heart Association.

CARMEL SKI CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

The Carmel Ski Club, at their meeting at the Naval Postgraduate School on May 8, elected officers for the coming year.

Outgoing president, Judy Brooke, handed the gavel over to Hans Rogge of Pacific Grove, the new president. Other officers elected were: Uno Kodres, vice president; Marcy Wood, secretary; Richard Frazer, treasurer; Steve Baptista, program chairman; Gary Fife, lodge chairman; Don Wald, publications chairman; and Gary Walter, member at large.

The Carmel Ski Club, with its approximately 100 members, maintains a ski lodge in the Lake Tahoe area near Truckee. Outings and events are planned throughout the year on both the Monterey Peninsula and at the lodge.

More information on the Carmel Ski Club and its activities can be obtained by contacting any of the club officers listed above.

KUSP'S MOST SUCCESSFUL AUCTION EVER

After the smoke cleared and the figures were totaled, KUSP's fund-raising radio auction made more than $42,000. This figure represents the most successful auction for KUSP to date. Its success was due to the hundreds of volunteers, businesses and bidders who contributed to the event.

The bidding action came from the telephone lines and floor bidders. Some of the auction items were sold for more than their retail value, but many of the larger items were auctioned at a considerable savings to the bidder.

Among the bargains were an indoor spa, a weekend in Napa including a hot-air balloon ride, cases and magnums of various wines, dinner for two with limo service, a nine-foot boat, as well as hundreds of other items.

Crowds gathered daily at the Abbott Square on Cooper Street to enjoy free concerts by various local artists as well as join in the bidding fun.

MONTEREY GUESTLIFE MAGAZINE HONORED

Monterey GuestLife magazine was named one of five winners and a runner-up in the category of special interest publications at the Western Publishers Association annual conference.

From 1,200 entries, 60 judges narrowed the field down to 300 finalists. Sixty winners in 20 categories were honored with the coveted Western Publishers Association Maggie Award.

Judging was based on magazine features, departments, columns, readability and covers.

Monterey GuestLife, published by Desert Publications Inc., is a hard-bound, prestige hotel room publication. It is placed and maintained in more than 6,000 rooms and suites of the most distinguished hotels and motels in Monterey County for the entertainment and buying assistance of registered guests.

EDITORIAL:
PREPARE FOR THE FUTURE

While California now has a population of a little less than three and a half millions, at no distant day it will sustain 15 millions, and Oregon and Washington will increase in like proportion.

Twenty or twenty-five millions of people in these three states, instead of the five millions and a half that we now have, is no extravagant forecast. The enterprising and far-seeing people of today must lay their plans and outline their policies well in advance to provide the facilities which will profitably engage in activities of those coming millions. And all the units which make up the States must do their part.

SUNSET STUDENTS AGAIN EDITORS OF THE PINE CONE

Next week the boys and girls of Carmel will publish the sixth annual Sunset School edition of the Carmel Pine Cone. Eagerly awaited by Pine Cone readers — and even more so by the Pine Cone staff, which rests on its oars during Sunset School Week — the paper is already in preparation by a large staff of young news gatherers, feature writers, poets and artists.

Taking a youthful view of community problems, the boys and girls will present editorial comment on Carmel current events, cover all routine happenings, and give us a resume of commencement activities at the school.

The Sunset School number, presented just before the closing of school every year since 1930, has become famous. Many queries have been received as to the date of the special edition this year, and we are proud to announce that it will make its appearance on June 5.

COUNCIL DRAFTS MOTEL BED TAX AFTER STRUGGLE

Carmel city councilmen came one step nearer to a proposed bed tax by calling unanimously for a draft ordinance on the subject last night.

The action climaxed an evening of struggle to establish the true identity of the goose that lays Carmel's golden egg.

Motel-hotel owners and operators spent the first two-thirds of the adjourned council session professing to know the old girl well. She is, they say, the free-spending tourist who, if she finds a tax on her bed, will spread her valuable wings and fly to untaxed beds outside of town.

If adopted, the four percent measure could net the city $65,376 annual revenue from the 821 transient rental units in four hotels and 43 motels, according to a report prepared by City Clerk Larry Rose. The figures are based on a $9 per night estimated average price and 65 percent average occupancy.

BIG SUR FIRE BRIGADE GETS $500

The Independent Insurance Agents of the Monterey Peninsula have presented a check for $500 to the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade.

The brigade is a non-profit volunteer association, created primarily to protect the homes and other buildings of the Big Sur area. It responds to calls as far north as Bixby and to Lucia in the south.

The greatest problem facing the brigade is how to obtain needed fire-fighting equipment with limited funds. The $500 from the Insurance Agents will go toward the purchase of a used fire truck.

HOSPICE FILLS NEED FOR TRANSITION BETWEEN ACUTE CARE AND HOME

Dr. Jerome Rubin is proud of the growth of the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula. He is quick to give credit to others, but it was through Dr. Rubin's initial efforts that the Hospice became a reality.

During the past five years, the Hospice has developed one of the most integrated programs for the delivery of hospice care in California and the United States. The program emphasizes continuity of care from the potential cure of a life-threatening illness; or, through the dying process, it encompasses death and bereavement for the family.

Accordingly, the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula provides service to patients in hospitals, at home, at convalescent and residential care homes when requested, and in the soon-to-be-opened Hospice Inpatient Facility.

MARY TEEL JOHNSON WINS MUSIC AWARD

Mary Teel Johnson of the Commodore Sloat Chapter of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution has received a personal NSDAR Certificate of Honorable Mention in Music from the National Society, American Heritage Committee.

The national award was announced in Washington, D.C. at the recent NSDAR Continental Congress attended by 4,000 members. It was presented to her personally by the regent of California, Mrs. J.J. Strayer.

The award was in recognition of the Christmas music program she developed for the Commodore Sloat Chapter last year at the Christmas luncheon. Regent Mrs. William Gooley submitted the program for competition.

Mrs. Johnson is a concert pianist and well known in music circles on the peninsula although she and her husband are fairly recent arrivals to our fair community. Mrs. Johnson was assisted by Suzanne Gallaher in the program presentation last Christmas.

INTERIM TO HOLD AUCTION

Interim, Inc. will hold its fourth annual dessert tasting and auction at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, May 30 at the Monterey Peninsula Unitarian Church.

The dessert tasting and auction will feature delectable desserts prepared by Interim's board members as well as musical entertainment. Items to be auctioned include gift certificates from restaurants and goods and services donated by local businesses as well as a duplicate of the desserts offered for tasting.

Interim, Inc. is a local private non-profit organization which provides social rehabilitation programs for residents of Monterey County who have experienced mental health problems. Interim operates a short-term crisis program, a transitional program and a community housing program with facilities in Salinas and on the Monterey Peninsula.

Proceeds from this fund-raising event are designated for Interim's building fund. Interim is raising funds toward purchase of an apartment building in downtown Monterey to be used for independent housing for mental health clients.

Tickets for this event are $10 per person and may be obtained by calling Interim in Monterey at 649-4522.

PEACE BEGINS WITH THE CHILDREN

"Peace Begins With the Children" is the slogan adopted by the Waldorf School Foundation of the Monterey Peninsula for its fund-raising campaign. John and May Waldroup will provide the setting for the event, the kick-off to be held at the Thunderbird Bookshop with a "high tea" from 4-6 p.m. Sunday, June 1.

Political, social and economic uncertainty is the rule of the day. In light of this, we must ask ourselves, will today's child be prepared to cure its ills and make harmony out of chaos? And to what extent does the educational process contribute to our present state of affairs?

The challenge of education is not only to prepare the child for the demands of our escalating technological age, but to enable him to apply that knowledge creatively and responsibly. To think creatively allows one to respond to life and its complex demands with hope, to see beyond that which is presented and acknowledge the possibility of change. To act responsibly is to act out of compassion and reverence for life.

Waldorf schools, the largest independent worldwide school movement, founded over 60 years ago, believes it has the answer to our present dilemma. As stated by its founder, Rudolph Steiner, "our highest endeavor must be to develop free human beings, able of themselves to impart purpose and direction to their lives." Free from the culturing and prejudice that creates domestic violence and global conflict and free from the purely one-sided rational thinking that blocks us from our full humanity.

Superior intellectual thinking, reverence for life and the capacity to change what is harmful and unhealthy in our civilization. This is the cornerstone upon which Waldorf schools stand.

Children are the messengers of love, hope and peace we send forth into the future and the Waldorf school and its balanced approach to education provides an environment where children may develop into human beings capable of contributing to the well-being of their community and make possible peace on earth.

CARMEL VALLEY COMMUNITY YOUTH CENTER

Ready campers?

"Good morning boys and girls, how is everyone this morning?"

It is 10 a.m. and another day of camp at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center has begun. Phyllis is checking in with the campers before she explains the day's schedule, for each day is different at camp.

This summer for the first time specialists are involved in the day's plans. Some days Neil will be the movement specialist; other days a tennis instructor from Quail Lodge will come to teach the older campers. Gina Welch will come for music and drama and Nicki Tostevin will teach art. On some days sign language will be taught. Art and dance classes will also be part of the summer's plans.

All of the special instruction is in addition to an already exciting summer day camp program. The children will swim at the youth center recreation swim every afternoon. Many activities will focus on nature. There will be hikes, field trips and overnights. The children at camp plant a garden every summer. And of course, games, crafts and lots of laughter and fun are part of every day camp program.

Camp hours this year are from 10 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. There will be a before- and after-camp program available for those children who need additional care. The before-camp program will begin at 8 a.m. and the after-camp program will end at 5:30 p.m. Those children who wish to participate in both day camp and swim lessons should sign up for the 9 a.m. swim lessons so that they will be ready for camp at 10.

We hope your elementary school-aged child will join us for an exciting summer at the C.V. Community Youth Center day camp. For registration or further information, call 659-3983 or come by the center's office any morning.

In addition there will be registration from 3-5 p.m. on Thursday, June 5. Hope to see you then!

CARMEL VOICE

BY SAM SALERNO

Disc and data

Record producer Jack Daugherty in town for a few days to relax and work on his forthcoming new album. Jack was responsible for discovering and producing many of the Carpenters' gold records, including "We've Only Just Begun." Jack was born and raised in Carmel, and maintains a home here and one in Los Angeles.

THE BARE FACTS

Yes, you saw right...those were two girls basking in the sun at Carmel Beach at the end of Ocean Ave., recently and were their faces red. It happens that the two visitors from Germany didn't realize that it isn't kosher to go topless in Carmel.

A local resident called the police about the infraction and when they arrived, the girls had already donned their tops. Rick Miner, who keeps our beaches clean, just happened to be working in the area at the time. Funny, he was picking up papers in the same area for quite a long time. Hmmmm! The girls told a friend that everyone goes topless in Germany. I know topless is the norm on the French Riviera. We saw some beauties there last year.

BASSO PROFUNDO

Jim Freeman, bon vivant and former Lt. Commander gets his first civilian job and what a job. Jim loves singing and he's now the Singing Maitre D' at Andre's in The Barnyard. Jim has a great repertoire and his vocal exploits have been heard at the Mission Ranch piano bar where many frustrated singers get their vocal jollies. Stop by and catch Jim...he might even sing your request.

YOUNG AND RESTLESS

Jerry Douglas, who plays John Abbott in the daytime series The Young and the Restless on CBS (seen weekday mornings at 11:30), is in the process of starting his own movie production company. He hopes to film his first picture soon with some segments to be filmed in Carmel. Jerry was a resident of Carmel in the '70s.

GREAT ARTIST

Bob Carlile's Gateway Gallery on Dolores raving about Dalva Duarte. Her paintings are the most popular in the gallery and sales have been very good," so says Bob. In a recent interview in Paris, Dalva Duarte said, "I have an insatiable urge to paint constantly, relentlessly and enthusiastically. I am immersed in my work, which I need as I need breathing. Painting is my only total commitment. I cease to exist without it." Born in Brazil, Miss Duarte paints now principally in Paris, her home for the past 16 years. You'll enjoy an enormous talent when you check out the works of Dalva Duarte.

PATRON OF THE ARTS

Connie Booth of Pebble Beach introduced a new vocal group from Boston to some of the hotspots in the area. They are known as One O'Clock Jump and have appeared at Tuxedo's, The Highlands Inn, Monterey Bay Club, and the Pacheco Club. She hopes to bring them back again in the fall.

TEE IT UP

Jack London's announces their First Annual Golf Tournament to be held at Rancho Canada Monday, July 7, 1986. Net proceeds donated to the Carmel High School "We Care" project.

Ernie Williams of the Red Lion mentioned that he was going to shoot in the low 70s because he doesn't think the temperature will get any higher.

Wonder how Pebble Beach can keep its course in good condition what with all the play they get? Simple! Daniel Nordell and his staff keep the course in superb condition at all times and this isn't easy when you consider the caliber of the players patronizing this establishment each day. You don't get the zero to 5 handicappers on a regular basis...it's usually the high handicapper who wants to tread the same ground as Nicklaus, Watson, et al. But they are the folks who keep the cash register ringing. Good job, Dan!

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

It has been reported that a local Carmel lass hit one of the Lake Tahoe Hotel casinos for $2,500. She stuffed her winnings into her purse and headed nervously for the elevator and her upstairs room. At the second stop, a large man in dark glasses with a ferocious guard dog entered the elevator. The dog, sensing her panic began to growl. The man said, "shut up and lie down!" which she did immediately. Startled, he said, "Not you lady, I'm talking to the dog." Red faced, she explained her nervousness and he volunteered to direct her safely to her accommodations. The next morning as she checked out and attempted to pay her bill, the assistant manager explained that entertainer Lionel Richie had picked up the tab and left a note: "Thanks for adding some unexpected humor to my trip!" My source says it's true.

Something new at Sans Souci...lunch, catering to the locals. Stop in.

Shag O'Rourke part of the group making up "Hands Across Dolores"...that is, from Bud's Pub to the Hog's Breath...seems as though they couldn't get enough victims to go all the way to Long Beach. Or enough hands!

Catch you next week.

Converse with your inner voice

"In Search of Intimacy: The Inner Partner," is the theme of an interactive talk with Rusty Klassen. The "Inner Partner" is an exercise in becoming better friends with ourselves through self-talk.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Legislation in Pennsylvania has established minimum mandatory jail sentences for people convicted of certain crimes against children and senior citizens who, in the words of Governor Richard Thornburgh, are the segments of the population "most vulnerable to heinous crimes, particularly those involving physical violence." Under the law, people under 60 years of age who commit crimes against victims over 60 will face stiff minimum mandatory penalties for such crimes as rape, assault and theft by deception.

Of all things, the button-sized batteries used in the hearing aids of many older people are proving to be an unexpected health hazard to grandchildren and other youngsters. The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that there have been hundreds of injuries, and even deaths, among children who've swallowed such batteries. When young children come to visit you, the commission advises, keep such batteries, as well as other dangerous objects, well of their reach.

"A MAN'S STORE"

April Masten nurtures her music and her family

By ANNE PAPINEAU

IT'S BEEN A busy year for April Masten, mother of a five-month-old daughter and composer of a just-born album, Not So Much to Want.

Both record and child are firsts for this woman who began writing songs before she reached her teens. Masten, 31, grew up in Palo Colorado Canyon with her two sisters, brother, and her parents, the whimsically termed "stand-up poets" Ric and Billie Barbara Masten.

While local imagery pervades her lyrics, April Masten these days resides in a place whose spirit is far-removed from that dramatic canyon. For eight years Masten has made her home in Berkeley — a place where she can "pursue art," although drug wars mar her neighborhood's overall friendliness.

"You can be retired from babies and jobs, but you can't be retired from your art," Masten observed.

During a visit to Carmel sandwiched between San Francisco Bay Area concerts, Masten acknowledged the impact that family and her childhood home continue to make on her life. Their legacy represents both an artistic spark and the conviction to develop it.

"My father Ric Masten was on the road a lot," she recalled. "He was writing songs for Warner Brothers and during the Vietnamese war he started writing protest songs. He inspired me. I've just really started giving him credit. I used to think I'd done it all myself."

"My mother was a great mom. She is a stand-up poet, and she also carves and draws — a real artist. She gave up a lot to raise us and I remember her disappointment, so I try not to do that," Masten said.

'My motto is to inspire people to consider their art and pursue it.'

These days Masten is juggling a real 1980s schedule. With little Cara in tow, Masten appears in concert, trains to resume her job as an aerobics instructor and invests care in her marriage to journalist Vince DiGirolamo.

"Luckily I started the record before I was pregnant. There's no way I could do both," she said. "I believe you shouldn't give up your art, but you shouldn't give up everything for your art if it gives you meaning and purpose. The baby is part of my art."

INSPIRATION FOR the title song on the album came not from the 1980s, but from the plight of American women who took jobs vacated by men during World War II.

"I had been studying labor history and learned of those women. Some had gotten wonderful jobs, then they lost them when the men came home. I wrote a song about women's experience at that time, Not So Much to Want. It's a very sad ballad about a woman who wants to weld a gate. Before she gets a chance to do that, she's told to go home.

"I wanted to make a record like she wanted to make a gate," Masten mused.

A 1973 graduate of Carmel High School, the singer was a familiar figure on campus, performing her original works on guitar.

"I fool around with words and a few chords. I write and re-edit and re-edit and change," she explained.

Masten studied classical and flamenco guitar from the time she was 8, and had written 60 songs by the time she was 15.

The "small town feeling" of the Monterey Peninsula is a quality that she misses, but Masten made the decision to move on and study music at San Francisco State University.

"With what I wanted to do with my music, it was important to live in the city," she noted. "It offered the producers of my record, my backers and the club format."

In addition to clubs, Masten often appears on Bay Area public radio and at political rallies, including one sponsored by the National Organization for Women at the 1984 Democratic National Convention in San Francisco.

Masten gave up her music for about five years, she said.

"When I met my husband I dropped it. Instead I studied classical music. I was deciding whether to write historical or political music."

The composer credits exercise as a catalyst for her to continue her craft.

"Music, dance, all those things go together. Teaching aerobic exercise put me in front of an audience and I try to inspire them. It gave me incentive," she said.

Masten said that both she and her husband believe in reserving time for pursuit of art, and both have discovered what a challenge that is.

"I've always worked, but it was housework I found most stifling. My husband and I both believe in working part time to pursue your work and pursue your art. When I came home the housework stared me in the face, that's what I had to do first.

"In the song, Just Like Sally Ride, I was thinking how Sally Ride can be an astronaut and a wife and mother. She made me think, why can't I do music, too."

Masten describes her first album as "eclectic." It combines elements of jazz, pop and folk.

"Having a record has been the greatest thing," she said. "I

A MARATHON OF fanciful plays will be staged for two successive weekends by Children's Experimental Theatre. To Your Good Health, pictured here, was presented during the 25th Annual Spring Festival. Admission is free to the productions, which feature children from third grade age through high school. All plays will be presented at Carmel's Indoor Forest Theatre.

C.E.T. readies its gift of theater to community

PRESENTING A GIFT of performance to the community, Children's Experimental Theatre will stage six diverse plays free of charge as part of its 26th Annual Spring Festival.

The festival represents the culmination of a year's work for students of C.E.T. The plays will be staged two successive weekends, May 30 through June 1 and June 6 through 8, at the Indoor Forest Theatre, Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel.

The third and fourth-graders will present Stone Soup; the fifth-graders, Rumplestiltskin; the sixth and eighth-graders, a murder mystery called Singapore 1910; and the senior class will produce three kinds of comedy: a farce, a poetic fantasy and a naturalistic drawing room comedy.

Evening performances are at 7:30 p.m. Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. On Saturdays, performances will also be presented in repertory from 9:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. and noon to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

Schoolchildren throughout Monterey County have been introduced to Children's Experimental Theatre through C.E.T.'s Traveling Troupe, which experienced youngsters take on tour, during the school year, to 25,000 elementary schoolchildren annually.

Choraleer spring concert set

The Choraleers will present their final concert of the season at 3 p.m. Sunday, June 1 in the Steinbeck Forum of the Monterey Conference Center. Admission is free to the program, a musical tribute to the "Fifty, Nifty United States."

The Choraleers, sponsored by the Monterey Parks and Recreation Department, are directed by Suzanne Gallaher. Donna DeVincenzi accompanies the group on piano. She will be joined by Richard Conklin on drums and Kathy Nathan on bass.

Information concerning the program is available through the Monterey Parks and Recreation Department, 646-3866.

tried to get people to review my concerts, and until I 'had vinyl' they wouldn't pay any attention to me."

In 1983 her husband was offered a 10-month assignment teaching journalism in China. Masten joined him there and performed 12 concerts.

"It was a very different life," she noted. "I learned they don't have equality of women yet, although women work side by side with the men. They do celebrate International Women's Day — they give the women a half-day off."

With many projects in progress, Masten still retains some goals.

"I want to get the album promoted, and I want to give the baby lots of love, to be with her as much as possible. With babies it seems like, at first, 'How am I going to do all this?' Then you find out you can. My motto is to inspire people to consider their art and pursue it."

Masten will perform in concert at 8 p.m. Thursday, May 29 at the Wharf Theater in Monterey. She will be joined by Barbara Borden and Susanne Vincenza of the band, Alive! Tickets are $5.

Her album, Not So Much to Want, is available locally at Do Re Mi in Carmel and at Recycled Records, Pacific Grove, as well as during the concert.

"The expansion of the orchestra's services marks the first time that we have been able to enter into other repertoire available for the symphonic medium," said Music Director and Conductor Clark E. Suttle. "I am pleased to offer an innovative program of concerts giving the concert-goer a variety of musical styles to choose from, encompassing the music of the Baroque, the Classical and Romantic eras as well as a very pleasant and exciting contemporary composition."

The roster of soloists includes pianists Andre-Michel Schub performing the Grieg Piano Concerto and Grant Johannesen performing the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 2; the Haydn Cello Concerto in D Major will be performed by cellist Nathaniel Rosen; violinist Miriam Fried will perform the Sibelius Violin Concerto; Richard Strauss' Horn Concerto No. 1 will be performed by hornist A. David Krehbiel; and the Trio dell'Arte will perform the Beethoven Triple Concerto.

Repertoire for the season includes Brahms' Symphony No. 2, Richard Strauss' tone poem, Don Juan; Berlioz Symphonie Fantastique, and all-Beethoven concert, and Mahler's Symphony No. 5 in C-sharp Minor.

The season runs from October through May. Concerts are performed in Monterey at King Hall, Naval Postgraduate School; at Sunset Theater, Carmel; and in Salinas at Sherwood Hall. Season tickets may be ordered through the symphony office.

Carl Jung film introduced

A TEA-RECEPTION is planned for 2 p.m. Saturday, May 31, to launch the opening of ticket sales for the film Matter of Heart.

Described as "the extraordinary journey of C.G. Jung into the soul of man," the film is sponsored by Monterey's Dream Theater to benefit both the Carl Cherry Foundation and the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung. Sunday's reception will take place at Cherry Hall, Guadalupe and Fourth, Carmel.

In making the announcement of this event, Marilyn Sanders, president of the Friends of the Cherry Foundation, stated that the afternoon's activities will include an informal welcome to the foundation's many old and new friends.

She added that "We are all interested in the development and enrichment of our community through greater knowledge and appreciation of the arts and sciences."

Joining Sanders in welcoming the Friends and others will be Alan Weber, director of the Dream Theater, who is making possible the showing by providing the theater's facilities (177 seats) to the foundation and the C.G. Jung Friends for this major fundraising effort.

"We are proud to be part of this community effort in bringing this truly remarkable film to the Monterey Peninsula," Weber said.

Matter of Heart is an inspiring film portrait of Jung, a man whose genius and humanity caused his voice to reach far beyond the sometimes exclusive realm of psychiatry into redefining the essential nature of who we are and what we hope to become.

For further details regarding the reception — to which the public is invited — or the film, which is to be shown at the preview benefit on June 15, call 624-7491 or 649-8809.

Party commemorates Monterey's 216th birthday

IN OBSERVANCE of the founding of Monterey on June 3, 1770, the city is hosting a grand birthday party celebration on the grounds of City Hall and Friendly Plaza.

Monterey, the state's most historic city, the capital of Spanish and Mexican California, will turn 216 years old. The observance has been set for 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday, June 1.

Activities will include continuous live music, entertainment especially of interest to children, a community "Happy Birthday Monterey" sing-along and cake cutting ceremony, party favors, an antique fire truck on display (the Old Gray Mare), a coed volleyball exhibition tournament consisting of teams from various neighborhood associations to include local officials and area leaders and complimentary cake.

The Colton Hall Museum, dedicated to the history of the City of Monterey and the important event which occurred at this site, the California Constitutional Convention, will be open to the public from 1 to 4 p.m. as well. Visitors will also have the opportunity to meet Father Junipero Serra. Area volunteers will parade in full costume throughout the afternoon.

The Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, located directly across the street from Colton Hall at 559 Pacific St., will also be open to the public.

Staff and volunteers from the Museum on Wheels program will oversee cross-cultural hands-on workshops for children in the Friendly Plaza area. Youngsters will have the opportunity to create art objects that are used to celebrate holidays and historic events from different cultures such as masks, instruments, party hats, decorations and banners.

Pacific Street will be closed from noon to 5 p.m. at both the Jefferson and Madison streets intersection. Plan on using alternative travel routes.

Visitors are advised to bring their own picnic lunch complete with a blanket and a lawn chair. Hot dogs and soft drinks will be on sale for those not electing to pack a picnic. With the exception of the hot dog and soft drink concession, the activities are free of charge.

In the event of a heavy rain, activities will be altered and limited to those that can occur under the hallways of city hall. The Birthday Party Celebration will not be cancelled in total and/or rescheduled. Both the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art and Colton Hall will remain open as well.

More information can be obtained by calling the Monterey Parks and Recreation Department at 646-3866.

CLASSICAL JAZZ is in the offing when Jake Stock and the Abalone Stompers tune up at the grand party celebration honoring the 216th birthday of the City of Monterey. Entertainment will be provided free of charge Sunday, June 1 on the grounds of Monterey's City Hall and Friendly Plaza.

Free yoga program scheduled at Sunset Center

Monday night yoga classes will continue in the Babcock Room at Sunset Center through the month of June and will resume after the Bach Festival. A new feature of the June series is team teaching by Jim Weaver and Phyllis Haffner.

A free yoga clinic will be offered on the first Monday, 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. June 2. Thereafter, class time is 6:30 to 7:45 p.m. and there will be a clinic segment within each session.

At the beginning of every class, relaxation and warmup stretches will help to release the tensions of the day, permitting maximum benefit from the asanas ("postures comfortably held") and preventing soreness. The classes conclude with breathing exercises and deep progressive relaxation.

Weaver studied with Swami Satchidananda and is an advanced student of the Iyengar method. Haffner is noted for a gentle "building blocks" approach, similar to that taught by Lilias on PBS television.

The fee is $20 per month. For information and reservations, call 373-7968.

THEATER REVIEW
BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

Intriguing modern opera at Fort Ord

EVA PERON did not live long — she died in 1952 at the age of 33 — but her enigmatic and controversial brief life had a profound effect on her native Argentina and continues to hold the mystified fascination of biographers, historians and everyone who acquaints him or herself with her myth-laden story.

Eva ("Evita") Peron's single-minded strength and will to power, as well as her mesmerizing effect on Argentinians, are stunningly captured in Evita, currently on stage at the Fort Ord Cabaret Theater.

With music by Andrew Lloyd Webber and lyrics by Tim Rice, Evita is first-rate modern opera filled with intriguing, evocative music. Evita is entirely sung, in English, and no music lover should miss it, for the music is not only fine, but it carries the story line with a heightened power the spoken word might not have matched.

Evita tells the popular version of the life of Eva Peron, from her scramble to escape an Argentinian backwater at 15 and her discovery of sex as a vehicle to success, to her ruthless rise to great political power and the sometimes spectacular uses she made of it. Deified and vilified in her lifetime, Evita became — take your pick — saint or megalomaniac. Certainly her story is one of the most enigmatic and fascinating in modern political history.

Evita is a panoramic story with many changes of scene. In this cabaret production, the action surrounds the audience and moves from place to place around the theater to convey multiple settings with minimal scenery and props. This style of production involves the audience to an unusual degree; the action takes place very close up, heightening the tension of an already powerful piece. Director Michael E. Cheak has managed a large cast extremely well and paced the action and scenic movement expertly. Barney Hulse contributes careful musical direction which results in accompaniment that is pleasing, on time, and never obtrusive.

•

THE TWO MOST demanding roles in Evita are those of Evita herself and of Che, a character loosely based on Che Guevara. Evita's Che functions as a contrapuntal chorus for the play's action. While the main story line develops from Evita's point of view, Che steps in from time to time to comment, disagree or expand on the story in progress.

Laura Akard's Evita is a strong portrayal of the remarkable, diminutive woman who rose from chorus girl to the embodiment of a nation on the sheer strength of her will. The music for this role has a distinct sharp-edged theme. Especially in the first half of the opera, Akard sometimes belts out her songs with so much energy that she overwhelms us with sheer volume rather than characterization. Yet she is convincingly Evita, and her talent as a choreographer and dancer contribute mightily to her conception of the character.

As Che, Suzanne McConnell comes across with a truculence and hostile energy that up the tension level; in this production, her approach works. Like Akard, she is always on key and on cue, but both roles would benefit from more variety of emotion. In one brief, lovely number ("Another Suitcase in Another Hall"), Kathryn Ankenman demonstrates the point. As Peron's outgoing mistress, she sings her swan song with a delicacy and emotional range that are a lesson in nuance.

As Argentinian President/Dictator Juan Peron, Kenneth Boutelle brings effete charm to the role of a man outshone by his wife's charisma. His reflections on Evita's life ("She Is a Diamond") are sung with just the right mixture of mystification, regret, and imminent loss.

The Fort Ord Cabaret Theater is a genuine community theater, employing performers of varying degrees of experience; in small roles, the performances are necessarily uneven. The chorus of generals, for example, performs with a woodenness their military character does not excuse; on the other hand, the chorus of aristocrats turns in an expert performance, with its genteel musical sniping from an aptly placed corner of the theater. The chorus of people of Argentina is well rehearsed and performs Laura Akard's live and varied choreography with discipline and verve.

Farmer's market sells seasonal produce

Monterey Peninsula College will resume its weekly farmers' market at 1 p.m. Thursday, June 5 in the lower part of parking lot A, parallel to Fremont Blvd. off Via Lavandera and Fishnet Road.

Approximately 25 stands will be set up to sell seasonal vegetables, fruits and flowers. The market involves members of a farmers' cooperative who travel to various locations in the Monterey, Salinas and Santa Cruz areas each week.

All produce has been personally grown by the sellers and is usually picked the day before the sale. Many of the farmers use organic growing techniques.

The farmers' market will run each Thursday throughout the summer and fall from 1 p.m. until dusk. Visitors to the MPC campus are required to display a current parking permit or a temporary one-day ticket (available for 25 cents in ticket dispensers located throughout the parking areas).

Hospital to sponsor 'Heart and Sole' race

Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital will sponsor its seventh annual Heart and Sole Race 9:30 a.m. Sunday, June 8.

Co-sponsored by KSBW-TV 8, the 5 and 10K run starts and ends at the hospital. The course is made up of two 5K loops in a flat residential area. After the race, there will be refreshments, entertainment and the presentation of awards.

More then 700 runners participated in last year's race, which was watched by several thousand spectators.

All entrants receive a free Heart and Sole T-shirt. Entry fee is $7 for those who preregister and $10 the day of the race.

Entry forms may be obtained by writing or calling Race Director Mike Hutchinson, assistant administrator of the hospital, at 450 E. Romie Lane, Salinas, CA 93901, telephone 757-4333 ext. 247.

Deputy directors of the race are Clark Grant of KSBW-TV 8, Dave Lewis of Fleet Feet, Salinas, who provides technical assistance for the race; and Bob Johnson, director of pharmacy at Memorial Hospital.

Paintings portray whales, dolphins

SEVENTY ORIGINAL paintings by Larry Foster that are reproduced in The Sierra Club Handbook of Whales and Dolphins will be exhibited through July 27 at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History. Foster created the life-sized California gray whale sculpture that graces the front of the museum. An opening reception is planned 7 to 10 p.m. Thursday, May 29 at the museum, located at 165 Forest Ave., Pacific Grove.

Dual artists to show in Seaside

Works by Carl Bowman and Marilyn Slingerland will be featured throughout June at the Seaside City Hall Art Gallery. An opening reception is planned at 7 p.m. Friday, June 6.

California native Carl Bowman studied at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco. In 1930 he put his brush on the shelf and entered into the family business. He retired in 1975 and resumed painting.

Bowman's oil paintings consist of landscapes, still-lifes and portraits. His work has been displayed at the Monterey County Fair, East-West Gallery in San Francisco and the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Marilyn Slingerland is a local artist who will exhibit "Hand-made Paper Works." Her designs are based on science and technological themes, worked out as a language of symbols.

Computer components, math formulas and metal wires are precisely defined in and on hand-pulled paper surfaces, building up layer upon layer of texture.

The Seaside City Hall Art Gallery is at 440 Harcourt Ave., Seaside. Viewing hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, when city hall is open. Admission is free.

New CAA members chosen

TWO NEW members were accepted by the Carmel Art Association board of directors after 25 applications were reviewed during the twice yearly jury.

Eleen Auvil Hall of Corral de Tierra and Robin Johnson of Pacific Grove are among the 135 members of the 50-year-old artist owned and operated gallery located in the heart of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Solo and group exhibits, year round representation in the galleries and participation in private events are shared by the group of diverse painters and sculptors.

Hall has a degree in textiles and sculpture from Cranbrook Academy of Art, Mich. After teaching at several colleges, including Wayne State and Chicago Art Institute, she moved to California where she has been actively pursuing a full-time art career.

For the last four years Hall has focused on cast bronze as her primary medium though she readily considers her textile work as "woven sculpture."

"I love the feel of things and appreciate the tactile sense of textiles and bronze sculpture," she said. Hall's artwork is collected throughout the United States and Canada.

Also originally trained in textiles, Johnson turned to printmaking as her main thrust in 1982 while still living in Oregon. During a journey that lasted a year and a half, Johnson explored and reassessed her artistic and spiritual directions. She kept a journal, drew, photographed and thought while she traveled in Europe, The Netherlands and finally Indonesia.

"It remains the most exciting time of my life...a time of transformation," Johnson noted.

The next jury date for prospective members is Oct. 20.

Robert Clark paintings exhibited at Zantman

EGG TEMPERA PAINTINGS by Robert Clark will provide the backdrop for a reception honoring the artist on Saturday, May 31 at Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel.

The public is invited to attend the reception, scheduled 4 to 7 p.m. at the Sixth Avenue at Mission Street Zantman gallery location. Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served.

Clark works chiefly in the intense, luminous egg tempera medium. His subjects range from the foggy coast of England, to brilliantly lit Mediterranean scenes, Steinbeck's Salinas Valley and the mountains and canyons that conceal his neighbor's ranches on California's central coast.

Saturday's reception marks Clark's 27th year with Zantman Art Galleries. Born in Minneapolis, Minn. in 1920, Clark received his formal art training at the Minneapolis School of Art and the Walker School of Art.

The artist came to California in 1948 and for a number of years executed large-scale murals for museums and corporations. Settled on the central coast since 1964, he is now a full-time artist. Clark on occasion gives lectures and demonstrations. His paintings are represented in both private and corporate collections.

The Zantman Art Galleries are open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. There are two locations on Sixth Avenue in Carmel. For exhibit details, call 624-8314.

Colleen Ross originals featured

ORIGINAL PAINTINGS and signed and numbered serigraphs by Colleen Ross can be viewed at Hanson Art Galleries, Ocean Avenue near San Carlos Street in Carmel.

There are many experiences that contribute to the unique perceptions of every artist. For Colleen Ross, a major early interest was ballet, which she studied for nine years, and the influence of which can be seen in the colorful costumes, stage makeup and theatrical mood of her paintings.

Also significant are the romantic old movies that delighted her as a child and the music of the '50s and '60s which lend a nostalgic element to her work. Born in Maumee, Ohio in 1946, Ross began painting at the age of 15. Her first work, a portrait of Albert Einstein from an encyclopedia photograph, demonstrates how the images at hand can influence an artist's subject matter.

Like many women who paint, Ross received minimal encouragement to pursue art as a career, so she studied to become a teacher. She attended Bowling Green State University where she earned a B.S. in art education with a minor in sociology and specialty in painting.

After graduating, she spent several years juggling the various roles of wife, mother and teacher. She lived in a number of cities before settling in Arizona, where she remained for nine years. In 1979, never satisfied with teaching, she decided to pursue a career as a professional artist.

Ross' visibility increased dramatically with the success of her first one-woman show in Scottsdale, Ariz., which drew the attention of television and the press. Subsequent shows in Scottsdale, Newport Beach, Beverly Hills and San Francisco met with equal success, and the demand for her work has continued to grow. In April 1985 she selected Hanson Art Galleries as her exclusive international representative and publisher of her graphic works.

Ross currently lives in Northern California with her daughter Krysta and paints full-time. Her popularity and acclaim attest to her future as one of America's most collected artists. Her work has been featured in many publications, including The Arizona Republic, Elite Magazine, The Phoenix Gazette, Phoenix Home and Garden and others.

Her paintings suggest many periods and places, yet cannot be defined by any one in particular. They evoke equally the mood of a German cabaret or Parisian cafe, the fashion of the '40s, and the flamboyant dress, night life and flash of the 1980s.

One is reminded of Van Gogh in Ross' emotional use of color, of Degas or Toulouse-Lautrec in her subjects. She executes her paintings with visible, energetic brushstrokes, creating a visual and physical texture that is exciting and immediate. Colleen describes the choreographed patterns and movement which she creates in her paintings as being like a dance on canvas.

MPC students exhibit diverse artworks

The artwork of 29 Monterey Peninsula College students will be on exhibit in the Alvarado Lobby of the Monterey Conference Center throughout the month of June.

The exhibit is the first juried show for MPC art students and will include drawings, paintings, ceramics, jewelry and mixed media.

The 34 entries selected for showing were judged by juror Marc D'Estout, art director of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art and coordinator for exhibits in the Monterey Conference Center's Alvarado Lobby.

In judging individual pieces, D'Estout said he considered "the strength of the image, elements of design and composition, and the craft that went into it." He added that exhibits of this nature "create visibility for the college and are a good way for amateur artists to get their work displayed."

The exhibit will open with an informal potluck from 6-8 p.m. Sunday, June 1 in the Alvarado Lobby.

Chad Hammack paintings featured

Self-taught painter Chad Hammack of Monterey is the featured artist during June in the Activities Building of the Carmel Foundation, Lincoln Street at Eighth Avenue, Carmel.

"Nature and the Great Spirit that suffuses Nature so warmly, trustingly, mysteriously and, yes, rapturously have been my teachers," Hammack observed.

"The God-stuff within all of us is a wonderment and joy to me, an affirmation that our love affair with life is always just beginning. For me, painting can be an expression of that love affair."

Citing the story of a friend who taught himself to play the piano by ear, Hammack further noted that "The dizzying joys of teaching yourself, of countless awkward trials and embarrassing errors, of making your own discoveries and traveling into unknown lands — these acts of the unfettered imagination are, to me, as vital as the finished work."

Hours for viewing art exhibits at the Carmel Foundation are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1 to 5 p.m. weekends.

"There are users of 35mm and then there are masters. The masters align themselves far closer with the art photographers than the work-a-day commercial and journalistic photographers." With that statement Ron James sets the stage for his workshop, "The Masters of 35mm."

The true masters tend very strongly towards certain tools and techniques. In turn these have a strong influence on the appearance of the final images.

The workshop will be offered Saturday, May 31 by Monterey Peninsula Photographic Workshops. The fee is $40. To register, call 624-6870.

ROUNDUP

Jazz-themed art sought

In September the Seaside Art Commission will feature its annual Monterey Peninsula Jazz Art Exhibit.

The art commission seeks artists who are also jazz buffs who might be interested in creating work based on a jazz music theme. For more information about the exhibit, now in its third year, call 394-2130, 394-3547 or 394-5490.

Drawing, painting intensive begins

Local artists Anita Benson and Dick Crispo have organized "Courage to Create," a figure drawing and painting workshop.

The workshop is an intensive drawing and painting seminar for working with the figure, brainstorming creative approaches to visual input. It will feature slide lectures and studio work whose inspiration is derived from Eastern and Western philosophical approaches.

Workshop times are 1 to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, June 7-8, at the Pacific Grove Art Center. Fee is $35. For more information, call 375-2208 or 649-4657.

Dorothy Bowman color workshop set

Individual instruction in any medium is the feature of a color workshop offered Fridays until June 13 in room 10 at Sunset Center, Carmel.

The on-going program is taught by Monterey Peninsula artist Dorothy Bowman, who is herself versed in several media.

Course fee is $50. The class meets 7 to 10 p.m. To register, drop in on one of the classes.

Batiks, silk paintings displayed

Silk paintings and batiks by Leslie Kranz will be exhibited through June at the Fort Ord Arts and Crafts Gallery. In the corridor will be displayed photographs by Tom McCartney.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Federal Communications Commission has designated the following applications for a hearing to commence on July 24, 1986, at 10 a.m. at the offices of the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, D.C.: application of Northern California Communications Corporation to increase the power of KVIP (AM), operating on 540 KHz, from 1 KW to 5 KW at Redding, California; application of Jerry J. Collins for a new AM broadcast station to operate on 540 KHz at Carmel Valley, California.

The issues in the hearing are specified as follows:

1. If a final environmental impact statement is issued with respect to Jerry J. Collins which concludes that the proposed facilities are likely to have an adverse effect on the quality of the environment, to determine:
   (a) whether the proposal is consistent with the National Environmental Policy Act, as implemented by Sections 1.1301-1319 of the Commission's Rules, and
   (b) whether, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to (a) above, the applicant is qualified to construct and operate as proposed.

3. To determine: (a) the areas and populations which would gain or lose primary aural service from the Northern California Communications Corp. proposal and the availability of other primary service to such areas and populations, (b) the areas and populations which would receive primary aural services from the Jerry J. Collins proposal and the availability of other primary service to such areas and populations, and (c) in light thereof and pursuant to Section 307(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, which of the proposals would better provide a fair, efficient and equitable distribution of radio service.
4. To determine, in the event it be concluded that a choice between the applicants should not be based solely on considerations relating to Section 307(b), which of the proposals would, on a comparative basis, better serve the public interest.
5. To determine, in light of the evidence adduced to the foregoing issues, which of the applications should be granted.

A copy of the application of Jerry J. Collins, amendments thereto, and related material are on file for public inspection at The Carmel Pine Cone & Monterey Peninsula Review, San Carlos and Ocean Avenues, Carmel, CA 93921.

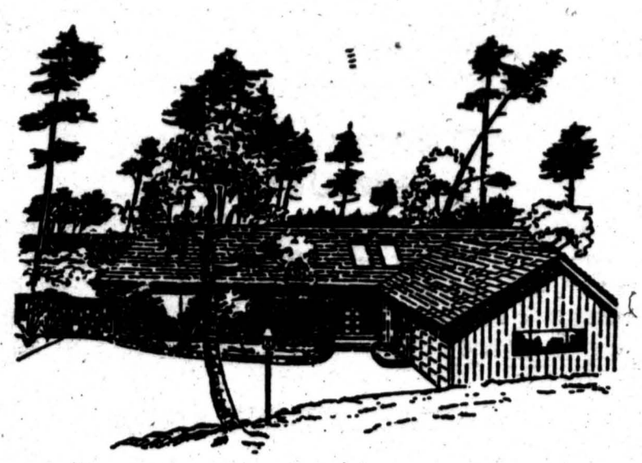
YOURS TO DISCOVER

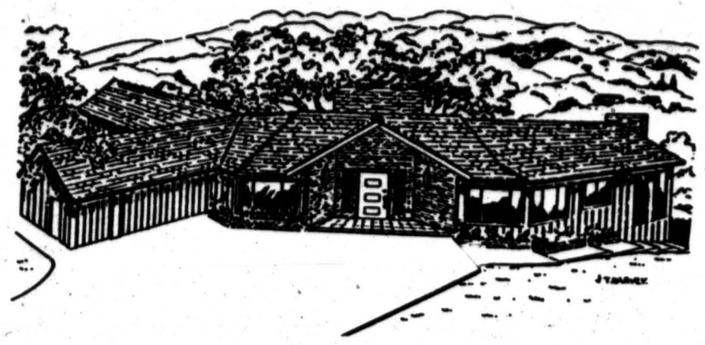


IN PEBBLE BEACH...and on a quiet street only steps from Monterey Peninsula Country Club...a sharp family home with a livable, spacious interior and excellent floor-plan. You'll feel right at home in the big living room with its high, vaulted ceiling and dramatic fireplace, the comfortable family room with its fireplace and built-in barbecue, the nice dining room overlooking the sunken living room, and the pleasant deck overlooking the garden. Three bedrooms, two baths. $305,000.

PROFESSIONAL BUILDING?

YES, IT COULD BE. It's a nicely remodeled home in an R-4 zone of Pacific Grove, meaning it could be used as, say, an accountant's office and home, or as a mix of professional offices. It's quite close to downtown, and there's ample off-street parking to the rear. The house has much "curb appeal," and we think it's priced right at $186,000.

SITTING PRETTY



ON A BEAUTIFUL rolling acre in Corral de Tierra with 20 mature oak trees, a terrific four-bedroom home with beautiful 180-degree views of the peaceful countryside. The living room, with its cathedral ceilings, wood beams and used brick fireplace, sets the tone, as does the large family room with its stone fireplace and doors leading to the big, big deck. Beyond is a cheerful kitchen with beautiful wood cabinets, double oven and stove, plus a nice breakfast area. The perfect location midway between Monterey and Salinas. $289,000.

ENJOY INCOME

A VERY NICE property in Pacific Grove on a 30 by 60-foot lot, with a store in front, and a tiny apartment in back. The apartment has a living room with fireplace, small bedroom, wee kitchen, and bath. It's a good location and close in. Offered at $198,000.

FOR THE WISE INVESTOR

IN THE HEART of Carmel Valley Village, a 60 by 100 foot site with two commercial buildings. The larger, right on the highway, houses three business firms on the ground floor, and an apartment (with potential for offices) upstairs. Behind is a smaller building, now used by a flourishing business. Solid tenants. $340,000.
